Urgent Aid Needs Drain Agencies' Resources

Jelleff Says D. C. Must Get Larger Welfare Fund or Boost Chest Gifts

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A gap between public and private welfare in Washington six weeks wide and thousands of dollars deep was dramatically outlined yesterday.

Frank R. Jelleff, president of United Community Services, announced that resources of at least seven Chest-financed agencies are being drained and in some cases exhausted because persons who want to get public welfare must wait weeks before they can even get an interview at the Welfare Department.

Specifically, he said the UCS executive committee has made an emergency appropriation of $1500 to the Salvation Army to take care of emergency relief cases coming into that agency each week. Many of these cases are of marginal workers who have become ill and lose their jobs, or of persons with low employment potentialities, past the age of 65, who simply have been "let out" of industry.

Not Enough for Food

Arthur H. Kruse, UCS director, said money available in private agencies to help such cases is so low that in some cases the agency has had to say: "Here is $6 for food. We know it isn't enough, but we are dividing up what we have."

Jelleff, in announcing the emergency grant, stated, "The community will be faced during the coming year with the problem of either financing more adequately the Public Welfare Department, or making additional funds available through voluntary gifts for meeting relief needs."

On the public welfare side, John W. Tramburg, department director, said intake is now six weeks behind applications for assistance. The relief load has been mounting steadily since November, he said.

"If it continues to mount," said Tramburg, "we may have to make an across-the-board cut in relief grants next spring."

Aged Being Replaced

Tramburg said apparently the aged marginal worker is being replaced in industry. In addition there have been "tremendous" proportionate increases in the number of blind people who have lost their jobs and need public assistance. With the District's high birth rate, he said, large families are "naturals" for relief when there is either desertion, death or hospitalization for the bread-winner.

Tramburg said he plans to ask the District Commissioners this week for three additional persons on his intake staff, on a temporary emergency basis. "But," he added, "We simply do not have the funds to handle any large increase in the welfare load without further cutbacks in grants."

Kruse said that "nobody these days has the time to make a study to see what's happening to these people who come to us." He said he imagined many are putting their rent on the cuff, and not eating properly. Some have had to pawn or sell possessions to live.

New Records Set By Stock Market 2d Day in a Row

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Wall Street enjoyed the heaviest stock trading of the year today as the market laboriously struggled up to a new 1949 peak. The market was the broadest on record, with 1191 issues traded.

Sales volume approached 2,300,000 shares, a 13-month high. It was the third day this year that turnover has topped two million shares.

Rails were among the better performers.

16 Killed, 91 or More Hurt In Packing Plant Explosion

Sioux City, Iowa, Dec. 14 (AP).—Sixteen persons—including one woman—were killed today in an explosion at the Swift & Co. packing plant.

As darkness fell hours after the blast, rescue workers braved gas fumes to continue digging into the debris for possible additional victims.

At least 91 persons were known to have been injured.

The blast was attributed by city fire officials to natural gas, but it was not known what touched it off or precisely where.

An area a block and a half in each direction from the scene was roped off. Gas masks were used by the rescue workers.

Patrolman Tony Bilunos, one of the first officers to arrive on the scene, said "it was a terrible sight."

"We found debris which rose 4 feet high in front of the building," he said. "Several persons were running around with blood streaming down their faces."

Rescue workers said they found blood spattered about the second floor offices. Several women's shoes were found lying about.

Harold Smith, of the Livestock Exchange Building, six blocks away, said that building was rocked by the explosion.

A beer truck carried six injured persons to a hospital before ambulances arrived.

The blast in the six-story plant, situated in the heart of Sioux City's big stockyard district, was heard as far as two miles away.

Dazed and shocked survivors said the blast came without warning. Many were unable to recall how they escaped from the building.

Mrs. Fern Lee said the floor "went out from under me with a big harrumph."

Workers spent an hour and a half pulling away knocked-down girders and hack saws were employed to cut away other girders so that the debris could be searched for bodies.

H. C. Watts, Chicago, chief construction engineer for the Swift firm, said many women working in the office section were "in awfully bad shape" from ammonia fumes.

A small fire followed the explosion, but was quickly put out with little damage.

Witnesses said girl employes in the main office ran from the building with their clothes in tatters. Many of these were bleeding from wounds.

The southeast corner of the structure was a scene of twisted girders and chunks of loose concrete. Glass was shattered in many of the windows and debris could be seen protruding from them. An iron fence was left twisted by the blast.

Details Told On 3 Major Roads to D. C.

Superhighways Run From Baltimore, Near Frederick and Annapolis

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

New details about three Maryland superhighways leading into Washington were made known yesterday.

They involve (1) the Washington National Turnpike and the Northwest Freeway in Montgomery County, (2) the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and (3) the Annapolis-Washington Expressway.

The are the details:

Turnpike and Freeway—The Maryland State Road Commission probably will approve the proposed freeway idea advanced last week by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The roads commission has allocated five million dollars to build the new turnpike, already under way, from south of Frederick down to the vicinity of Brink, about five miles north of Gaithersburg.

Now the Roads Commission is expected to plan a continuation to meet the proposed freeway at a point on the Rockville-Darnestown road west of Rockville. From here it would run down the Cabin John Creek Valley to the Potomac River and the proposed bridge between Cabin John and Glen Echo.

Such a plan would eliminate bringing the proposed limited-access dual highway to the District

U. S. Steel Prices To Be Revised; Cost Rises Cited

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP).—Steel prices will be revised Friday by United States Steel Corp.

Benjamin Fairless, president of the Nation's biggest steel producer, disclosed the forthcoming revisions at a news conference today. And he added:

"We're going to increase prices and we're going to decrease prices."

Fairless would not say whether most products would be raised in price or lowered, but he said the increases would have to be made because of higher cost. He pointed to a recent freight rate boost and to the steel workers' pension plan to become effective March 1.

J. L. Block, vice president of Inland Steel, said "We'll study United States Steel's prices when they are issued and make our own decisions."

Visit to D. C. Of Hitler Aide Stirs Mystery

State Dept. Probing Request of Gillette For Full Information

NYHT News Service

The question of what Herman J. Abs, former fiscal adviser to Hitler, is doing in the United States remained a minor mystery last night.

Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), stirred the tempest when he made public a letter he had written Secretary of State Dean Acheson December 5 demanding full information on the Abs visit, which, he said, "would appear to have been kept a closely guarded secret."

The State Department promised a complete investigation, which still is not completed. Yesterday it advised the Senator by telephone, according to a formal statement by the Senator, that Abs was here with Dr. Wilhelm Vocke and Hans Treue, officials of the Deutsche Laende Bank, that he had been invited here by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and that he had come to Washington for a brief visit "with the Federal Reserve Bank here."

There is no Federal Reserve "bank" in Washington in the sense of the New York Federal Reserve Bank. The Federal Reserve System headquarters here said it had not invited Abs and had not seen him. The same word was given by the New York Federal Reserve Bank. The State Department explained last night that there had been a "misunderstanding," that it understood that Dr. Vocke, and not Abs, had been invited to this country by the Federal Reserve.

Abs, the department said, is here as a private citizen, and not at the invitation of any Government agency. He did see minor officials

Heavy Foot Boots Speeder to Jail After Mishap

John Fortune, 33, of 512 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, yesterday in Municipal Court was sentenced to 10 days straight time and $300 or 90 days on speeding charges.

The charges stemmed from a mishap Tuesday night when Fortune's truck plunged through a guard rail on the 11th st. se. bridge and hurtled 30 feet to the ground.

Judge George D. Neilson termed the incident "a flagrant case of recklessness." To which Fortune replied "My foot got a little heavy on the pedal." Fortune suffered only minor injuries in the crash.

Over a Barrel?

Original Star-Spangled Banner Made in Brewery, Court Told

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 14 (AP).—Was the Star Spangled Banner made in a brewery?

Maryland's Court of Appeals heard this version of history today in a dispute over the Star Spangled Banner Flag House in Baltimore.

It was there that Mary Pickersgill made the flag that flew over Fort McHenry in 1813 and inspired Francis Scott Key's national anthem, historians generally believe.

She completed the huge banner in the roomier confines of a nearby brewery, argued lawyers for one side in a lawsuit.

This was denied by the Star Spangled Banner Flag House Association, which said the flag was completed in a warehouse.

The State's highest court heard arguments in a condemnation suit by which the city of Baltimore seeks to take over a three-story red-brick rooming house next door to the flag house.

The property would be converted into office space for the flag association as part of a plan to create a memorial square as "an inspiration" to patriotism.

Attorneys for Annie Flaccomio, owner of the rooming house, cast doubt on the history of the flag house itself by stating it was "supposedly" the house where Mary Pickersgill made the flag which "is reputed" to have inspired Key.

They quoted a Maryland guidebook as stating that the flag was finished in a brewery.

Attorneys Louis R. Milio and Hyman Ginsberg also argued that The Star Spangled Banner did not become the national anthem until so designated by act of Congress in 1931.

Israel Begins Capital Shift To Jerusalem

Ben-Gurion, Staff Arrive, Following Government Action In Defiance of U. N.

Jerusalem, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion set up his headquarters in Jerusalem today after his proclamation that the Holy City is the Israeli capital "until the end of time."

Ben-Gurion came here with his prime ministry staff in the first practical step in carrying out the decision of the government and parliament to make Jerusalem formally the capital in flat defiance of the United Nations Assembly which voted to internationalize the city.

Ben-Gurion and Supply Minister Dov Joseph conferred on plans for the transfer of the government here.

Ben-Gurion visited a number of buildings in the Jewish-held "new" city which have been reserved for the government.

MacDonald Makes Call

United States Ambassador James G. MacDonald has "conversed" with the foreign office on the decision of the Israeli government to make Jerusalem its capital, it was made known tonight.

Foreign office spokesman Moshe Perlman, confirming that MacDonald had visited the foreign office, refused to discuss a report that the American envoy expressed the displeasure of the United States at the government decision.

Perlman added that no note had been received from the United States. He said that MacDonald's conversation "appeared spontaneous."

Perlman said that MacDonald and the British and French envoys visited the foreign office by invitation and implied that they had been notified formally of the government's move.

Big Moving Job

Truckloads of furniture and files started winding up the road from Tel Aviv.

The physical problem in moving will be a big one, and officials look forward to weeks of confusion.

Parliament is to start meeting here immediately after Chanukkoh (the Feast of Lights) December 26.

All Jewish morning papers except one hailed enthusiastically the government's decision to make Jerusalem the capital. The exception was the Communist Orgal Kol Haam, which said the decision meant abandoning the old city and much of the remainder of Palestine to "the British satellite King Abdullah of Hashemite Jordan."

Romulo Coming Here For Physical Checkup

Lake Success, Dec. 14 (AP).—Brig.-Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, president of the U. N. Assembly, will go to Washington tomorrow for a week's rest and a checkup at Walter Reed Hospital.

Romulo said he feels fine and there is nothing wrong as far as he knows despite the strenuous schedule he followed during the assembly. Anyway he wants a good rest.

He plans to return to New York after his Washington visit.

Jessup Talks On Hill Prior To Asia Trip

Confers With Kee, Eaton and Mansfield On Building Non-Red Ring South of China

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, the State Department's chief trouble-shooter on Far Eastern problems, went to Capitol Hill yesterday for a long bipartisan consultation on his coming survey mission to Asia.

He spent two hours with Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.), the ranking minority member, and Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.), the only other member of the committee who was available for the meeting.

Judging from comments afterward, Jessup's chief purpose on his two months' trip will be to discover what the United States should do to strengthen and maintain a ring of non-Communist nations south of China, from the Philippines all the way to Pakistan.

China Regarded as "Gone"

He put most of his emphasis on keeping southeastern and southern Asia from Communist hands rather than on trying to retrieve China, which policy-makers here have long regarded as "gone" and past help.

Jessup told the Congressmen he would, of course, go to any part of China that was open to him. But since virtually all the Chinese coast is already in Communist hands, this meant that he probably would go only to Formosa—unless Formosa, too, should collapse to the Communists before he reaches the island in January.

The State Department has not the slightest intention of asking the Communists to let Jessup enter Communist-held territory.

The Ambassador plans to sail from San Francisco on the President Cleveland next Tuesday (December 20) and go first to Japan for a stay of at least five days. Thereafter his schedule will bring him to southern Korea, Formosa, Hongkong, the Philippines, Indo-China and Siam, where the American envoys in southeast Asia plan to meet with him on February 13.

Visit Burma, India, Pakistan

Either before or after the meeting in Siam, Jessup also intends to visit Burma, India, Ceylon and Pakistan, staying in each country long enough for some intensive and intelligent fact-finding.

He assured the Congressmen yesterday that he would send interim reports to the State Department from time to time, and that these would be made available to the congressional committees on foreign policy.

His meeting with the House committee leaders was the State Department's most substantial consultation on Far Eastern affairs since Congress adjourned. Jessup would have had a similar meeting with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) and most of

Mercy Flight in Vain

Young D. C. Woman's Death In Boston Probed by Police

By John London
Post Reporter

Death of a young Washington woman, believed to have been caused by an abortion, was being investigated last night by police in Boston where the woman had been flown in a frantic effort to save her life.

Jean Costello, 21, Capital Airlines reservationist, of 1747 F st. nw., died at 11:45 p. m. Tuesday at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston. She had been rushed there Saturday from Georgetown University Hospital in hope that an artificial kidney at the Boston hospital might save her life.

The pilot of the mercy plane was William J. Davis, 45, of 209 Belle View blvd., Alexandria, who was killed Monday night at the controls of the Capitol DC-3 which crashed into the Potomac.

Lieut. Francis G. Wilson of the Boston homicide squad quoted Medical Examiner William J. Brickley as saying "there were indications an abortion had been performed."

Dr. Brickley said the cause of death was "septecemia (blood poisoning) due to perforation of a pregnant uterus."

The girl had been about four months pregnant, according to Lieutenant Wilson.

Lieutenant Wilson said he would interview the parents of the attractive, slim brunette, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Costello, of Herrington, Kans., to find out what they had been told by the girl about the background of her illness. He said the girl had been questioned at the hospital and had denied she had ever been pregnant or that an abortion had ever been performed on her.

JEAN COSTELLO
Her death investigated

Police here said Miss Costello asked a friend to call a Washington physician Thursday when she began to hemorrhage.

The doctor visited the girl and examined her about noon, the friend said. At night another doctor appeared at her rooming house, said he had been referred by the first doctor, and gave the girl penicillin and vitamins, according to the friend who said he was present at both visits.

That same morning Mrs. Francine Frazier, Miss Costello's landlady said she discovered the girl in a dazed condition in her room,

Liberties Endangered By Security Program, CED Report Asserts

Military Declared Over-Emphasized; Keep-in-Balance Plan Offered in 7 Points

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

America's national security program is inefficient and out of balance. It menaces the concept of civilian supremacy. It over-emphasizes the military. It threatens the destruction of individual liberty.

This was the warning made public yesterday by the Committee for Economic Development, whose 100-odd trustees are among the Nation's most prominent and progressive businessmen.

The CED's 8000-word report, "National Security and Our Individual Freedom," constitutes the most outspoken forecast of impending danger to personal and economic liberties arising from the defense program that has been issued since the war by any responsible group, business or other.

Important Freedoms Gone

It finds that the security program, though absolutely necessary, is "a dangerous force in our society." Already, we have given up important freedoms without adequate challenge."

The trend has run toward undue secrecy, raising the prospect of less and less disclosure, so that the public becomes less and less informed, less and less able to participate in the most vital national decisions.

The report says that the trend also has run toward overemphasis of military affairs, and of the military itself, at the expense of nonmilitary measures and of the dominant position the civilian must hold in national affairs, even including military affairs.

Police That Endanger Liberties

"This trend, particularly if coupled with fear and hysteria or with complacency and ignorance, may produce policies which, in the name of security, endanger essential liberties," the CED report states.

"Security measures, uncurbed by the requirements of freedom, can undermine our free institutions. Public apathy and the pressure for security can lead us along a dangerous road—a road that ends in what has aptly been called a garrison-police state.

"In a garrison police state, the soldier and political policeman rise to power while the institutions of civilian society and of freedom shrink. In the name of security, channels of public information dry up; the press becomes a mere purveyor of official handouts . . .

"The process of public discussion atrophies. Political parties decline. The power of Congress dwindles. Administration by civilians shrinks, relative to administration in uniform. The courts weaken. Cut off from information, the power of the citizen fades . . . All freedoms suffer."

The report in no way minimizes the need or the fundamental im-

Creation of Atlantic Union To Outbalance Russia Urged

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

It isn't the atomic bomb alone that has given the world its worst case of jitters, Atomic Scientist Harold C. Urey declared here last night. It's the whole technique of modern warfare, where "the victors and the vanquished are almost equally destroyed."

The only sedative for world nerves—Europe's in particular—is for the Western democracies to set up "an overwhelming unbalance" of power against Russia.

This "positive move against totalitarian dictatorship," Dr. Urey said, might convince western Europe that security lies with the West.

Otherwise western Europe will fall, "Africa and Asia will be in the grip of Soviet power, and this will leave the Western hemisphere and, particularly ourselves, isolated.

Kostov Guilty, Is Sentenced To Be Hanged

Bulgarian Court Gives Prison Terms To 10 Co-Defendants

By R. R. Buckingham

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Former deputy premier Traicho Kostov was sentenced to death today less than 24 hours after he defiantly declared he was innocent of treason and espionage.

All 11 defendants in the trial were found guilty. But Kostov, the only one to plead not guilty, was the only one sentenced to death.

Five of his co-defendants were sentenced to life imprisonment, three to 15 years, one to 12 years and one to eight years.

Former finance minister Dr. Ivan Stefanov and former deputy construction minister Nikola Pavlov, once a member of the Bulgarian Communist Politburo, both received life.

With Kostov, Stefanov and Pavlov were named by the prosecution as "ringleaders" in the alleged plot to assassinate the late premier Georgi Dimitrov and to hand over Bulgaria to Yugoslavia and the West.

But unlike Kostov, Stefanov and Pavlov confessed to all charges, sought to implicate Kostov in their "crimes" and then pleaded for mercy from the court.

The defendants were accused of Mutual Aid Provision And Reexport Clause Causes of Misgivings

The British government expressed its misgivings yesterday about at least two of the conditions proposed by the United States for controlling the billion-dollar military aid program.

Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, had an hour's talk on the subject with Secretary Acheson yesterday. Afterward the Secretary issued a statement saying that "there are still some questions of substance which are under consideration and which will take further discussion to resolve."

This was intended to correct an earlier statement by the Secretary, at his press conference, that negotiations were in the "drafting" stage and were nearing completion.

Actually the British have not yet begun to negotiate the bilateral agreement which, under the Military Assistance Act of Congress, is

Student Says Reds Got Atom Plans Through Alaska

Allegation that atomic plans got to Russia through a Kodiak, Alaska, lend-lease base was made on the Fulton Lewis radio program last night, according to the United Press.

The charges were aired on the same program and over the same network that first reported the sensational story of Maj. George Racey Jordan, since discredited by Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, head of the wartime A-bomb project.

The new witness is Royall Edward Norton, 29-year-old Navy veteran, now attending Clemson College, S. C., according to the United Press. Norton is supposed to have spotted A-bomb blueprints in unlabeled parachute bags aboard a lend-lease ferry plane. He is quoted as saying high school chemistry lessons enabled him to recognize the plans.

Million Italian Workers Called On Strike Today

Rome, ec. 14 (AP).—Italy's three major labor unions called a strike tonight of one million state employes.

The strike, affecting virtually every state service except the railroads, was set to begin at 6 a. m. Thursday and end at the same time Friday.

Communist, Catholic and Socialist labor unions originally called the strike for last Saturday. They postponed it at the last minute when it appeared the government might boost a wage increase offer.

Panama Gets the Nod

U. S. Recognizes Arias Regime, Deplores Trujillo Talk of War

By the United Press

The United States recognized the new government of Panama yesterday and at the same time sharply admonished President Rafael Trujillo of the Dominican Republic for talking possible war in the Caribbean.

Trujillo has asked his Congress for authority to declare war on any country which harbors troops preparing to invade the Dominican Republic.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson said the United States deplores the way in which Arnulfo Arias won the presidency of Panama, but that, nevertheless, the new government fulfills the usual requirements and was being recognized. Then he said of Trujillo:

"This Government deplores the action of the Dominican Republic in having brought up the possibility of the use of armed force for the purpose of 'war.'

"It is our view that proper procedures exist within the inter-American system for dealing with situations which threaten the peace."

Arias took over the presidency of Panama November 24 after a series of coups climaxed by an army announcement that a recount of a 1948 election showed he was the real winner.

Acheson pointed out, however, that Panama changed governments without foreign interference.

Asked whether "nonintervention" also would be a criterion in American recognition of Communist China, he replied that it would be a factor of some relevance.

France and Italy also recognized the Arias government yesterday.

CED Sees Personal Liberties Endangered

portance of a gigantic program for national security. Indeed, it points out that the present critical period may last a generation and that the threat of war may last for decades. Accordingly, "large scale measures for national security seem necessary for years to come."

And, the report continues, without adequate national security, there can be no freedom or personal liberty.

But the dilemma, the report argues, is to keep the program of national security in balance with the requirements of individual freedom. At present, it implies, the balance hangs too far the wrong way. It must be corrected in order to weigh "in the direction of freedom."

For, the report says, "Security bought at the cost of destroying our system of individual liberties would be self-defeating."

The CED makes a series of recommendations, concerned almost entirely with matters of procedure and organization. Admittedly, these apply only to one, and perhaps not the most important, area for solving the problem.

Series of Recommendations

The recommendations include:

1. Developing the National Security Council into the principal executive agency for formulating and reviewing comprehensive and balanced security policies.

2. Adding to that body three full-time civilian members, with quasi-Cabinet status.

One would be responsible for "a more effective flow to the public of information relating to national security."

The second would be responsible "for reviewing the effect of security measures on individual liberties and advising the President" about them.

The third would be a general policy assistant to the NSC chairman, i.e. the President.

3. Clarifying and developing the role of the National Security Resources Board.

4. Promptly appointing a full-time chairman to it.

5. Establishing in the Department of Defense "a strong civilian staff independent of control by the military" to help develop and appraise defense policy.

The general purpose of the above recommendations is to strengthen the principle of civilian supremacy in governmental and defense policy, and to permit a broader, less narrowly military outlook on security problems.

Further recommendations called for:

6. Creation of Committees on National Security in the House and the Senate, representing all congressional committees whose jurisdiction covers a major part of the national security field.

7. Devotion of a special section of the President's annual state of the Union message to a discussion of "problems involved in the national security program and their relation to freedom."

Set against the analysis the CED makes of the problem, the most interesting recommendation was that calling for the appointment of the two specialized officers on the National Security Council.

The one with responsibility for stimulating the flow of information to the public is seen as necessary in order to "counteract the present trend toward undue secrecy." He should "constantly press for the release of information," the report said.

"It will be necessary to keep security regulations under continual study to make sure that the curtain of secrecy is not drawn tighter than necessary. Some information must be withheld. But we believe that the regulations could be so drawn as to provide the citizen with much more information than he now receives . . .

"At present, there is one-sided emphasis upon the indoctrination of officers both military and nonmilitary. A Government official is rarely commended for disclosure . . . A better balance between secrecy and disclosure will give the citizen a sounder basis for exercising responsibility, without impairing the administration of security.

Liberties Have Suffered

The second new member of the NSC is necessary, the report argues, because a narrow, exclusively military view of national security represents a great danger both to personal liberties and to a free economy.

Personal liberties have already suffered, the report said. The reference was to peacetime military service, the program of loyalty investigations, and the actions of investigatory agencies "which sometimes degenerate into organs of oppression and intimidation."

An indirect threat to personal liberties, the report said, comes when a security program of the present size "endangers the free economy which underlies so much of our individual freedom."

It can do this in three ways:

By the burden of taxes, which weaken the incentive to produce and which can actually reduce our long-range ability to produce;

By the control of business activity through Government contracts, so that businessmen degenerate into mere "hired administrators" of Federal programs; and

By increasing the probability of imposing direct controls over economic activity, thus reducing the effect of free market forces.

More important than the CED's recommendations, perhaps, was the tone of the report and its analysis of the present trend. Central to this, and repeatedly stated, was the concern with the diminution of civilian control.

"There is today no direct challenge to the principle of civilian supremacy," the report admitted. But, it went on, "the magnitude and character of our security program make the effective exercise of civilian supremacy increasingly difficult."

Present faulty organization, under which neither the NSC nor the NSRB have "lived up to their high potential," makes it difficult for the President, the Congress and the public to exercise civilian supremacy, the CED declared.

"Without effective civilian control," the report concluded, "there is danger that security policy will be made more and more by the military alone and in terms of the individual problems of military defense for which they are responsible rather than in the larger terms of security and freedom."

CED members most directly concerned with leading the preparation of the report were Fred Lazarus, jr., president of the Federated Department Stores of Cincinnati, and Marion B. Folson, treasurer of the Eastman Kodak Co. of Rochester, N. Y.

Repairs Begin At White House

sponsorship of the Washington Chapter of the Atlantic Union Committee.

But earlier in the day, he told a press conference that Maj. George Racey Jordan's report of atomic material shipments to Russia was a "crazy" story he was "ashamed" of.

"We make awful fools of ourselves sometimes," he said. "Last summer we had a furore over some "missing" U-235 (one of the materials that A-bombs are believed made from) when the Russians had enough to make a bomb. They must have laughed themselves sick over that.

"Then we have to stir up this crazy story."

Against Baruch Plan

In his speech and interviews later, Urey suggested that the United States should discard the Baruch proposals on control of the bomb as unworkable.

The plan could work, Urey asserted, only if the nations of the world would submit to a cut in their national sovereignty.

He doubted that the United States Senate would approve a treaty based on the Baruch plan. As for Russia—

"It is impossible to read the reports coming from the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission or from any other branches of the U. N. without reaching the conclusion that the representatives of the U. S. S. R. have no intention of working with the rest of the world in any way whatever except on the basis of Communist conquest of the world."

Russia's leaders, he said, "are people of the mentality of Al Capone . . .

"They have no concept of the subjection to law all of us observe . . . and they have no concept of the establishment of a higher law on a world scale such as that contemplated in the Acheson-Baruch proposal."

This plan calls for U. N. ownership of the A-bomb and U. N. inspection of all nonmilitary atom stockpiles.

Urey said that about the only chance for avoidance of war now is that "overwhelming unbalance" of power—an Atlantic Union.

This would not only cause "immense dissatisfaction in Soviet-dominated areas" and undermine Russia dictatorship; it would sooth Europe's two major fears. These, he said are:

1. War between America and Russia, with the Continent as battleground.

2. That in such a war, Russia armies would envelop it before help could come from the United States.

The University of Chicago professor told a large audience in the Interior Auditorium that there could be no doubt that there is a definite division between East and West.

"It only matters whether you realize that as truth and go on from there."

The Atlantic Union Committee, said Urey, is supporting a resolution in Congress requesting the President to call a convention of seven countries of the Atlantic Pact to explore federal union possibilities. Hearings on the resolution are due to start next month.

The seven nations are the United States, England, France, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and Canada. They could invite other democracies to participate.

But Urey said Atlantic Union is no panacea, that it is only a start to world union.

"Eventually," he asserted, "there is no satisfactory solution to modern military problems except a universal government . . ."

"Just as the Atlantic Union t first will be anti-Russian, I hope it will be anti-Franco and Argentina and Portugal. I cannot consider Spain, Portugal and Argentina democracies.

"I also hope," he said, "that eventually we may include them —but not now."

Hershey Asks Draft Extension in June

Among Scientists

U. S. Agency To Referee Rows Is Urged

New York, Dec. 14 (AP). — President James B. Conant of Harvard University today proposed a new Government agency to referee the conflicting opinions of scientists about national defense.

Dr. Conant, who is a member of the General Advisory Committee of the Atomic Energy Commission, sets forth his plan in the January issue of Foreign Affairs, published here tomorrow.

He said controversies among national military leaders have involved Congressmen and civilian Government officials in questions where the technical judgments differ widely. He said the United States has no method now for refereeing such scientific disputes.

He wrote:

"No one need warn those who have been immersed in the day-to-day planning of the defense of the Nation that they should adopt a cautious or even a skeptical mood in listening to technical experts, be they scientists or engineers. All experts are human and tend to be carried away with enthusiasm for their own ideas . . .

"But the existence of a conflict of technical opinion on many, many details in all manner of new developments of importance to our security requires that we take a careful look at the procedures used in arriving at decisions. The President and Congress have the ultimate authority, but neither the Chief Executive nor congressional committees have the time to settle the enormous number of issues whic hmust necessarily arise in any research, development or procurement program."

Pope to Proclaim Assumption as Dogma in 1950

Vatican City, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Pope Pius has decided to proclaim as a dogma late in the Holy Year of 1950 the bodily assumption of the Virgin Mary to Heaven, a high Vatican source said tonight.

The source said the pontiff had set the proclamation date as December 8—the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. The date also coincides with the day in 1854 when Pope Pius IX proclaimed the dogma of the Immaculate Conception.

The dogma of the Assumption would declare that on the Virgin Mary's death, her body was taken into heaven and reunited to her soul. The dogma of the Immaculate Conception proclaimed the belief that Mary was preserved from all sin from the time her soul was created and infused into her body.

The declaration of a dogma for the church is the most solemn act a pontiff can perform, and it has never been exercised since the Vatican Council of 1870 defined the infallibility of the Pope.

Aquitania Retires

London, Dec. 14 (NYHT).—The Cunard White Star Line announced today that its 45,000-ton liner Aquitania, 35-year-old sister ship of the ill-fated Lusitania, is being withdrawn from active service."

National Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey yesterday urged Congress to extend the peacetime draft law as "insurance' against possible aggression.

"Intelligent people don't let their insurance lapse just because they don't need it," the major general told an Elks Club luncheon.

The peacetime draft, first in the Nation's history, is due to run out June 24. With an election approaching, the speculation is that Congress will let it die.

Congressmen opposed to extending the law point out that the Army already is releasing some of the youths called up in the first draft calls. No men have been inducted under the draft for many months.

Hershey told the Elks Club that 250,000 men joined the armed forces in 1948 "when they saw us coming." He added that the draft is the best way to "buy three or four months" of time when it would be most desperately needed.

He explained it would take at least that long to set up new draft machinery and start getting men into uniform in case of another emergency.

Army to Release 6000 In Advance of Holiday

The Army has a Christmas present for those men eligible for discharge or release between December 22 and January 2.

Secretary Gray yesterday authorized major commanders to release such enlisted personnel 10 days earlier than scheduled. The purpose is to enable them to spend the Christmas holidays with their families.

The Army said about 6000 men will be affected.

British Query Arms Aid Pact

needed before any military supplies can move from the United States.

The French, Italians, Danes and Norwegians are already negotiating, and some of their earlier objections have already been disposed of. The Benelux countries—Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg—are expected to start negotiating today.

As for the British, an American draft of an agreement was submitted to London, and the cabinet instructed Franks to find out what two of its provisions would mean in practice.

One would pledge the British to extend mutual aid to the other European countries that signed the North Atlantic Pact. The other recipients of help from the United States are ready to make an identical pledge.

The British wanted to know whether this was an "open-ended" agreement, and whether it would commit them to indefinite amounts of help to their neighbors. They got the assurance that no such indefinite pledge was involved, any more than it was in the similar agreements under the European Recovery Program.

Their second doubt concerned a proposed promise to get the approval of the United States before reexporting anything made or derived from American military aid supplies. On this point, too, they were assured that doubt could be disposed of easily in negotiating the wording of the new agreement.

Although the hitch is not serious, it may delay the first shipment of arms to the British by delaying the signing of the agreement.

World Bank Grants El Salvador First Loan in Central America

The World Bank yesterday made its first loan in the Central American area—a $12,545,000 credit for electrical power development in El Salvador.

The money is to pay for imported materials and equipment for developing power resources on the Lempa River, one of Central America's largest streams.

The loan is guaranteed by the government of El Salvador. It is for a term of 25 years and carries an interest rate of 3¼%, plus commission at the rate of 1% per annum which, in accordance with the Bank's Articles of Agreement, is allocated to its special reserve fund. Amortization payments, calculated to retire the loan by maturity, begin on July 15, 1954.

The Bank's announcement said:

"Lack of electric power is a handicap to the economic and social development of El Salvador. The Bank's loan will finance the foreign exchange costs of constructing a dam and hydroelectric plant, with the necessary substations and transmission lines, on the Lempa River at Chorrera del Guayabo, a point 36 miles northeast of San Salvador, the capital city.

"The project will provide a generating capacity of 30,000 kilowatts. The power generated will be distributed to the capital city and to San Miguel, an important industrial center. This additional supply will satisfy the backlog demand for electric power accumulated by urban, agricultural and industrial consumers, especially in the textile and mining fields, and provide for some future expansion.

"It will also permit the progressive retirement of presently operating diesel generators, thus effecting a saving of foreign exchange by reducing the need for importing fuel."

the members have been away for most of the congressional recess.

With the committee unavailable, the State Department has made no systematic contact on the Senate side. Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), a senior member of the Foreign Relations Committee, did have long talks with Jessup and with Secretary Acheson after returning from the Far East.

Smith Would Occupy Formosa

Smith lunched with Acheson at the Secretary's invitation, and presumably told him, as he also told a press conference, that the United States should occupy Formosa to keep it out of Communist hands.

Senator Theodore Green (D., R. I.), another recent visitor to the Far East, had a few minutes' talk with Acheson at the Gridiron Club dinner last Saturday, but otherwise has not told the State Department of his impressions. Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), still another returned traveler, talked about the Far East with Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman, but did not see either Acheson or Jessup.

Both Kee and Eaton praised Jessup after yesterday's meeting, and thought his findings in Asia would have an important influence on American policy decisions in the new year.

Favor Help for South Korea

They assured him that an economic recovery fund for southern Korea would be high on their priority list for the new session of Congress. The last session voted a stopgap of 30 million dollars, although the Administration had asked for 150 million.

Kee said his committee probably would act quickly on an authorization for the remainder.

On another of the new year's problems, that of recognizing Communist China, Secretary Acheson said yesterday that the security of American representatives in China would certainly influence the American decision.

At the moment American officials in China have very little security, he told his press conference. He said he would have to be fully informed about their security before making any recommendation to President Truman about recognition.

Asked about Formosa, the Secretary said this was an important matter which was constantly before the National Security Council, and therefore he would not speculate about it.

He told a questioner that the United States regards Formosa as a part of the former Japanese Empire, but that since it was being administered by the Chinese Nationalists its present status was different from that of Germany.

Dimes Drive Will Seek Dollars, Too

The forthcoming March of Dimes drive must stress dollars instead of dimes, Chairman Edgar Morris told the fund drive's executive committee yesterday.

Increased work and cost of treating poliomyelitis call for larger contributions in the two-week drive which starts January 15, Morris said.

The committee met in the District Board room to name committees and lay plans for the 1950 drive. It intends to send contribution requests to all District residents listed in the telephone directory and to schools. Under consideration are plans to stage a benefit show at Constitution Hall.

Nationalist Troops Flee To Indo-China

Hongkong, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—Several thousand fleeing Nationalist troops have crossed the Indo-China border and have surrendered their arms and placed themselves in French custody, reports from Saigon said today.

They were identified as remnants of the 14th, 17th and 71st Armies, recently encircled and defeated in south China.

It also was reported that Gen. Pai Chung-hsi had flown to Hanoi to negotiate safe passage through Indochina to Hainan Island for the retreating Nationalists.

The evacuation port of Yamhsien was captured by the Reds last week, reportedly cutting off thousands of Nationalist soldiers.

The French previously said all Chinese troops, Nationalist or Communist, would be asked to surrender their arms and would be interned. Pai, it is believed, is seeking to ease these restrictions.

Meanwhile, the Chinese Communist radio at Peiping reiterated charges that the Nationalist soldies will join the French to fight against Viet Nam guerillas.

Relief Fund Halts Romania Shipments

Lake Success, Dec. 14 (NYHT). Faced with Communist Romania's request for withdrawal of an International Children's Emergency Fund mission, the United Nations agency announced tonight it was suspending shipments of some $2,600,000 in relief supplies to Romania, until the problem of international supervision of distribution is ironed out.

The fund will allow delivery of $15,000 worth of streptomycin drugs to complete treatment of some hundreds of Romanian child victims of tuberculosis.

Maurice Pate, executive director of the fund, said he was "most desirous" that a solution be negotiated, and the issue will be taken up again at the end of January by the fund's 10-nation program committee and 26-nation executive board.

The Romanian Minister of Health, Dr. Marza, notified the fund in a letter of November 29 that Romanian welfare activities for children and mothers had so expanded that there was "no reason for prolonging the period of duty of an international staff in Romania to carry out the administrative work of UNICEF."

The letter asked withdrawal of the mission, but continuing shipments of the balance of an original $9,209,100 program, with distribution by Romanian personnel.

16 Indonesian States Sign Constitution

Batavia, Java., Dec. 14 (AP).—A provisional constitution welding a new nation of 77 million people out of the lush Indonesian islands was signed tonight by delegates of the 16 states and territories.

The charter is to become effective in about two weeks, probably on December 27, when the Netherlands government turns its 300-year rule over to the new independent federal republic, the United States of Indonesia. The new republic is to remain a partner with the Netherlands under the Dutch crown.

The Parliament of the Indonesian Republic at Jogjakarta only this morning ratified the constitution and the 6-week-old Hague agreement for creation of the United States of Indonesia.

The action completed ratification by all the 16 states and territories.

Austrian Peace Talks Deferred

New York, Dec. 14 (NYHT).—Blocked by Soviet insistence that settlement of certain points in an Austrian peace treaty await the outcome of Soviet-Austrian talks in Vienna, the deputies of the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers agreed today to suspend negotiations until January 9 in London.

Georgi Zarubin, the Russian deputy, told the American, British and French deputies he was confident some solution might be found in London.

During the New York session, agreement was reached on the question of German assets in Austria, but finally the Russians balked at completing action on other points until the outcome of the Vienna talks. Those talks have turned on Russian demands for a large Austrian payment in return for supplies and services allegedly given to Austria by Russia since 1945.

U. S.-Canadian Talks to Begin Here Today

By the United Press

American and Canadian officials will open talks here and in Ottawa today in an effort to settle two disputes which have caused a slight ripple in the "Good neighbor" policy of the two countries.

Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson said the Ottawa meeting is intended to settle a legal tiff between America's Colonial Airlines and Canada's Trans-Canada line whose competition for passengers has resulted in a legal tangle.

The conference jn Washington will take up Canada's request for a more liberal interpretation of the American immigration laws where "respectable" Canadian leftists are concerned.

Still a third conference will be held later to consider a United States request for a redivision of water from the Niagara River.

The two governments stepped into the airline dispute after Colonial obtained an injunction to prevent the Canadian airline's planes from landing in the United States. The Canadian Air Transport Board promptly ordered hearings to consider cancellation of Colonial's Canadian landing rights.

Status Under Logan Act

In announcing the Ottawa Conference, Acheson sharply censured the United States airline for its attitude. He said there was no basis for Colonial's argument that it was barred from testifying by the Logan Act of 1788, which prohibits Americans abroad from working against United States foreign policy.

Acheson said the State Department's top legal adviser notified Colonial last week there was no objection to its testifying.

"They have never requested any interpretation of the Logan Act and, as a result, it is a little hard for me to take their position seriously," the Secretary said.

Colonial has protested that a recent Canadian-United States air agreement which gave Trans-Canada the right to haul passengers between Montreal and New York, threatens to drive it out of business. The United States airline previously had a monopoly on the route.

Professor Turned Back

The meeting here on this country's immigration rules was requested by Canada. Canadian spokesmen said "respectable" Canadians are being denied entry to the United States.

Cited as examples were a Canadian professor with a teaching post at Washington University in St. Louis and a Canadian girl student who was not allowed to enter the United States on the return leg of a trip to Europe.

They said American officials finally relented in both cases but added that the Canadians should not have been barred in the first place.

U. S. Claims Garrett Fortune as 'Spoils of War'

Philadelphia, Dec. 14 (AP).—The United States Government laid claim today to the 30 million dollars Garrett snuff fortune as "spoils of war."

The litigation in Orphans Court involves the estate of Mrs. Henrietta Edwardina Schaefer Garrett who died December, 16, 1930. Mrs. Garrett, a widow, died childless. She left no will.

Since 1930 the court has reviewed more than 25,990 claims for the celebrated multimillion dollar fortune.

So bitted has been the struggle that at least three were reportedly slain in quarrels over who should get what share of the money.

Assistant United States Attorney General Arthur Schor is seeking to take over the estate by backing the claim of the late Johann Peter Christian Schafer.

Schor contends Schafer, a German citizen, was the only rightful heir and that his property in the United States became subject to seizure when this country declared war on the Axis powers in 1941.

Johann Schafer was an 80-year-old farmer living in Bad Nauheim, Germany, when he filed claim to the fortune, built by Mrs. Garrett's husband through the sale of snuff. Schafer alleged his father and the father of Mrs. Garrett were brothers. Therefore he was Henrietta's first cousin and closest surviving relative.

It has been establish that Mrs. Garrett's father was born in Bad Nauheim, Schor said.

Schafer backed up his claim with church records and letters which he said were from Henrietta's father. Throughout the drawn-out legal fight, Schafer's claim never has been seriously questioned.

De died in 1946 at the age of 92 and his claim descended to 37 relatives, all farmers in the Swabian Oberland section of Germany.

Anderson Tells Farmer to Talk for Self

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP).—Senator Clinto nP. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) today urged the Nation's farmers to "speak for themselves."

The former Secretary of Agriculture told delegates to the American Farm Bureau Federation's convention that for some time he has been wondering "who it is that's trying to speak for farmers, and who it is who should speak for farmers."

Anderson was the principal speaker at the federation's thirty-first annual meeting, a role usually reserved for the Government's incumbent agriculture chief. The federation leadership this year ignored Secretary Brannan, whose controversial farm plan was called by Federation President Allan B. Kline "a political scheme to get the votes of both farmers and consumers."

Another speaker, Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, told the convention that Europe has achieved "a spectacular recovery with industrial production now running 20 percent above prewar."

Anderson asserted farmers should "speak for themselves" first of all "by exercising their civic responsibility to take an active part in public affairs" . . . and through their own farm organizations.

Referring to past Senate debates on farm legislation, he said that those most active in their efforts to speak for farmers were their Congressmen and United States Senators.

"Although the duly elected farm organization leaders said one thing, many of the politicians insisted that these leaders didn't speak for farmers but instead the politicians themselves were the real reflectors of farm thinking."

Anderson said farmers who still think they can get along without belonging to any farm organizations are operating under a delusion.

Anderson said he "appreciated very much the hard-hitting fashion the American Farm Bureau Federation presses for action on its programs."

Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.) told the federation that the cost of the Brannan farm plan "would be so very great the Treasury could not stand it."

Gore described the plan by the Secretary of Agriculture as the Brannan "cheap food' proposal.

Allan B. Kline, federation president, and other leaders of the farm organization are opposed to the plan, which would let prices of perishable farm products seek their natural level. The Government would make up the difference, in direct payments to farmers, if those prices failed to give farmers a predetermined fair return.

Gore said criticism of existing farm price support programs and high food prices stemmed from "misinformation and misunderstanding, some of it deliberately fostered by people in the United States Department of Agriculture who berate Congress for not accepting the Brannan plan."

Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney (D., Okla.) hailed the Hoover program for reorganization of the executive branch of the Federal Government as "one of the great business engineering jobs of the century."

Monroney asserted, however, that the Hoover plan will not work unless Congress strives to achieve its purpose.

"Unless this reorganization is coupled with further improvement of the legislative branch, it can result it more costs and more personnel—instead of less," the Oklahoman said.

He said other reorganization programs attempted in the past "added another layer of bureaucracy, more personnel and more expense."

Hoffman told convention delegates that in addition to Europe's gain to industrial production, this year's bumper European harvest has boosted agricultural production to the prewar level.

The ECA administrator urged American farmers to give support to the United States' drive to expand imports from Europe. Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) said lobbying pressures on Congress will "become increasingly more acute as more and more groups and persons become the beneficiaries of Federal bounties." He added:

"As long as human beings find that, through organization and through pressures they can secure advantages for themselves, or the type of economic activity in which they are engaged, they will continue to do so."

He said the true test of the Government "will lie in its power to keep response to the many demands made on it within the bounds of our economic capacity to pay."

D. C. Woman's Death Probed

half on and half off the bed and only partly dressed.

Mrs. Frazier said the girl complained she felt sick but refused assistance. That afternoon Mrs. Frazier said she saw the girl was still sick so she wired her mother in Kansas that her daughter was ill.

"Mrs. Costello called me on the phone and told me to get her daughter to a good Catholic hospital and said she'd catch a plane to Washington," Mrs. Frazier reported.

"I tried to get her into a hospital but they said they'd need a doctor's certificate so I thought I'd wait till the mother arrived. Anyway Miss Costello said she wouldn't go to a hospital."

Meanwhile Mrs. Costello had called police from Kansas and said she had "reason to believe her daughter was in trouble," according to Detective Sergeant A. D. Clarke of the Washington homicide squad.

Clarke said he visited the girl later the same day, Thursday, in her room. She said she was hemorrhaging, denied she had been operated on and refused to go to a hospital, Clarke said.

He did not leave until a friend of the girl, a registered nurse, arranged to stay with Miss Costello for the night, Clarke added.

Her mother arrived about 6 a. m. Friday with her husband and son, Richard Costello. They prevailed upon Miss Costello to go to Georgetown Hospital.

Admitted as an emergency patient she was treated for loss of blood and kidney ailment.

When it was determined that her kidneys had become completely blocked, it was decided to rush her to Boston, nearest place where artificial kidneys were available, Dr. William Leary, of the Georgetown staff, said.

Fellow employes at Capital Airlines offered Saturday, to take up a collection to pay for a chartered plane but the company undertook the cost, about $80.

Dr. Leary and another physician accompanied the stricken girl in a DC-3 from which seats had been removed. She was administered oxygen throughout the trip.

Her parents and brother accompanied her on the plane trip.

At Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, doctors applied the artificial kidney, a large apparatus which takes the impurities from the blood stream, a normal kidney function.

But it was too late. She died Tuesday night.

Miss Costello, employed by Capital since April 5, 1948, attended the Central Radio and Brown Mackie business schools, then worked as a swimming pool cashier in Herrington before coming to Washington.

While working for Capital, she also served as secretary for a group which broadcast a program called "the Sky Clubbers."

Chest Group Hits School Health Policies

The District public schools were attacked on two sides yesterday at a luncheon of the health section, United Community Services.

Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society, declared students are "learning much more about nuclear fission than about their own reproductive systems."

"I really belive," said Everett, "that school authorities are aware of the facts of life, but they hate to admit them."

Dr. E. B. Henderson, head of the department of health, physical education and safety for the Negro schools in the District, admitted that "unfortunately" there is not enough soap and towels on hand for all students to learn good health habits like washing their hands before eating.

Both charges were leveled at the schools as part of a discussion of the need for health education. Everett declared that not enough money is being spent here on such projects.

Leather Toughened By New Process

Three scientists at the National Bureau of Standards here have succeeded in impregnating leather with natural rubber.

The result, they disclosed yesterday, is a shoe leather half again to twice as tough as normal leather soles, and 50 percent more waterproof.

Their results were shown first in scientific machine testing, and later confirmed by more realistic tests—actual wear tests of shoes on the feet of a plodding watchman.

Cooperating in the two-year study were Rene Oehler, Timothy J. Kilduff and Sverre Dahl, all research workers in the leather laboratory at NBS.

Two Years of Study

It took about two years of study and experimentation to work out the impregnating process, a follow-up development of researches that were begun as a wartime conservation measure. Earlier work at the bureau explored the use of synthetic resins in leather treatment.

But now that they have accomplished the feat, the three researchers make it sound pretty simple. The impregnation, they said, is accomplished by overnight immersion of the naturally porous leather in a solution of natural rubber. The finished product is about 15 percent rubber.

To the public, getting a shoe that lasts longer and keeps the feet drier is the accomplishment. To the shoemaking industry, the processing has added significance. Now, the bureau scientists said, "belly-cuts" from steer hides, may be fortified and made into sole leather.

In other words, the process not only makes good sole leather last longer but also can make inferior leather good enough to meet present day underfoot demands, they explained. They emphasized, however, that it may be several years before commercial firms get the product to the public's feet.

Scientifically testing the fortified sole for water tightness, the researchers simulated normal walking flexing on a machine which periodically bends and presses the before and after specimens on a wet sponge. The time and bending cycles required for water to penetrate through the soles was taken as its measure of water resistance

50 Percent of Absorption

Absorption of their rubber treated product was recorded as 50 percent of absorption of the untreated control specimen.

Abrasive tests, on other special machines, showed that rubber treatment as much as doubled the wear time, they reported.

Finally, bureau watchmen were outfitted with test shoes with one sole treated, the other untreated. The untreated soles wore out while the treated soles were only half worn away at the points of wear.

New Jersey Boy, 16, Convicted of Murder

Newark, N. J., Dec. 14 (AP).—Raymond Welsh, 16, was found guilty of first-degree murder today in the slaying of his teen-age pal. The jury recommended life imprisonment.

Welsh was charged with shooting Fred Januszkiewicz, 15, in order to steal $81 from him.

GI Art Student Accused of Trying To Make Money

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 14 (U.P.).—A 23-year-old commercial art student today was charged with sneaking into an engraving plant and attempting to counterfeit his own Christmas money.

Raphael Killebrew, 23, was released on $5000 bond following his arraignment on Federal charges.

Specifically, the Government said Killebrew unlawfully reproduced and photographed genuine 5, 10 and 20-dollar bills.

Charles A. Ellis, special agent in charge of the San Antonio bureau of the Secret Service, said the man, a Navy veteran studying art under the GI Bill of Rights, entered the engraving plant through a roof ventilator during the weekend.

He said the artist used the company's cameras to make reproductions of 5, 10 and 20-dollar bills, completed the negatives and was working on the actual engraving plates when seized Sunday night.

Dementia Praecox Found Caused by Abnormal Growth

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 14 (AP).—Dementia praecox—the Nation's most prevalent type of insanity—is caused by abnormal growth within the brain nerve cells, a Columbus psychiatrist said today.

Dr. J. F. Bateman of Columbus State Hospital for the Insane said he and Dr. James W. Papez of Cornell University found protein bodies never before described in the brain nerve cells of dementia praecox patients.

Discovery that dementia praecox is not caused by environment or abnormal conditions at birth may revolutionize scientific thinking on the disease, Dr. Bateman said.

The more protein bodies the more the patient was deranged, said the Columbus psychiatrist.

He explained, however, that after three years of study, his conclusions still must be tested with additional research.

New Equations May Explain Universe, Einstein Believes

By Alton L. Blakeslee

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Albert Einstein has worked out some mathematic equations which may explain how the physical universe is made.

They try to link in one law, the forces operating within the vast stellar universe and those operating within the tiny world of the centers of atoms.

He writes about them in a chapter of autobiography in a new book, "Albert Einstein: Philosopher-Scientist," just being published. The book, with chapters by 25 other prominent scientists, is the seventh volume in the Library of Living Philosophers, edited by Dr. Paul Arthur Schilpp of Northwestern University.

The new equations are intricate, and their usefulness cannot yet be proved, Einstein says.

In essence, the problem is this:

Matter is made of atoms, very small particles. But these particles also act like waves, and there is no explanation why. Energy travels in waves, but is made of very tiny separate units, which act like particles. This, too, mystifies scientists.

It is all a riddle that physicists have long been trying to solve. Both the particles of matter and the waves of energy travel so fast that they can't be seen in any position long enough for analysis.

Physicists can only say what the probabilities are. But they can't be sure. And not being sure, they don't know how matter and energy are made.

Einstein tackled the problem with the idea that perhaps gravitation would help show how a particle can be both a particle and a wave at the same time, and how a wave can be both a wave and a particle simultaneously. He worked out equations which he thinks have a fair chance of being proved.

Einstein has spent many years working on these new theories. Now, toward the end of his life, he is still on the same trail where he started, that is, on gravitation. His theory of special relativity, developed when he was a very young man, did not explain gravitation. He took another 10 years to write his theory on general relativity, which does explain gravitation partly.

His new mathematics, if they show how the universe is constructed, may explain gravitation fully.

Post Reporter

A hundred years hence, or maybe a thousand, the painstaking work that R. L. Cooksey is doing now may go unnoticed—but it'll be there, and a good thing, too.

For a mere $7500 Cooksey is toiling at the herculean task of bringing Fairfax County's old public records back to the point where they can be handled safely.

That means, for instance, that you'll be able to drop in at the county courthouse one of these days and examine "Liber K," which records, among other things, the purchase by George Washington of six acres of land adjacent to Mount Vernon.

Old Deed Book

This old deed book, now falling apart at the seams, its pages occasionally worm-eaten, the beautiful penmanship faded with the years, is one of three such books until recently at the Library of Congress.

Cooksey is at work in the basement of the courthouse because several things happened some time ago.

Thomas P. Chapman, jr., clerk of the Circuit Court and custodian of public records, noted many of the books were in bad shape. R. M. Loughborough, executive secretary of the Board of Supervisors, began a search for someone to repair them.

Restoring 400 Volumes

And a few weeks back the board hired L. C. Cooksey & Son, bookbinders, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to do the job. At least 400 books are to be restored. The senior Cooksey has had to return to his home because of illness, leaving his son to carry on.

In many instances all that is needed to restore a book is to provide a new canvas cover. That comes to $7.50. But if the book needs rebinding, the cost is $40.

It's when Cooksey takes on one of the oldest volumes—one dating from 1742, say, when Fairfax County was formed—that the task gets difficult.

Painstaking Task

He cuts the book out of the binding and scrapes or soaks off the old glue. He takes each page and trims it to a common size.

Then each page is placed on a piece of high quality paper and "skived" into it, so that the ragged edges fit into the new paper smoothly. Do this to all the worm holes in a 400-page book and it can get "mighty tedious," says Cooksey.

In addition, each page is veiled with transparent Japanese silk, and tissue paper pasted on top of it, to add strength and lessen the wear and tear. This is why one tattered book will cost $646 by itself.

Cooksey estimates he'll wind up the job by next March or April.

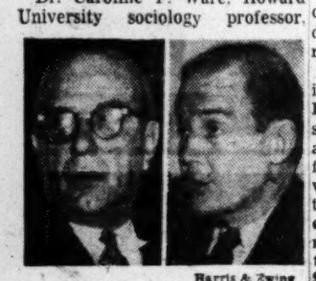
Point 4 Program Urged in U. S. Areas

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Congressional subcommittees investigating the Nation's economy yesterday heard a woman educator advocate a "Point Four" program for less favored areas of the United States.

Otherwise, they received opinions of officials and businessmen on such matters as low income, small business, investments and housing.

Dr. Caroline F. Ware, Howard University sociology professor,



Harris & Zwing
Foley Reed
Before economic subcommittee

suggested the domestic "Point Four" program in a statement before the low-income families subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. She advocated vigorous enforcement of the Employment Act of 1946 and maintenance of "maximum employment, production and purchasing power." And, under questioning by Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), Dr. Ware backed a Fair Employment Practices Act because the process of education, while preferable, was "too slow."

At a simultaneous hearing by the Economic Committee itself, Chairman O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) declared wartime taxes were smothering small business and needed changing to promote "competitive enterprise."

Previously, witnesses had called for tax adjustments which would make additional money available for investment. Among these were Philip D. Reed, chairman of the board of General Electric Co., and S. L. Shelley, president of an investment company. Both declared double taxation of corporate dividends definitely handicapped business expansion.

The subcommittee heard Housing Administrator Raymond M. Foley declare private builders should take the lead in providing adequate housing for low-income families. Public housing, he said, was "only part of the solution to the problem," though he considered the 1949 Housing Act "a major milestone in housing history." This act provides for $10,000 new housing units.

Foley said he did not believe Federal aid would be needed to house adequately all the 10 million families in the $2000 income bracket. Nor would it be correct, he added, to assume that the 2,300,000 families in that bracket who own their own homes "are adequately housed and need no assistance" just because they were home owners.

Dr. Ware pointed out in her statement that low income provides a "vicious circle of poverty, isolation, ignorance, lack of productivity, ill health, and continued poverty and isolation." She said she hoped the committee would find the means of breaking the "vicious circle."

Sayre Defends Hiss, His Aide in 1936-38

New York, Dec. 14 (NYHT). . . . up to August 1, 1948, my answer is unqualified."

Picked Hiss as Assistant

Sayre said he personally hand-picked Hiss for his assistant in 1936 on the basis of his "utter integrity and dependability" and his previous experience with trade agreements legislation. This was then one of the subjects with which Sayre was chiefly occupied.

He said Hiss' duties included reading the huge mass of documents that came daily to his office, and making sure that Sayre learned the contents of all the important ones. As he explained the routine, sometimes Hiss would clip a note to a document to draw it to Sayre's attention, and sometimes he would tell Sayre about the document orally either in his office or at lunch.

Sayre said he had no "specific independent recollection" of any of the four memoranda in Hiss' handwriting which are in evidence in the case. Chambers contends that Hiss gave him these memos to be transmitted to Moscow by the spy ring; Hiss contends he made them solely to refresh his own memory when he was reporting orally to Sayre about the documents they referred to.

On cross-examination Sayre denied that he had asked Hiss to help him get his present job. He said Hiss was in no position to help, and he had asked "the President" for the appointment.

Other witnesses today included Geoffrey May, former next-door neighbor to the Hiss family in Washington, and Mrs. Martha Pope, former maid in the Hiss household. Both testified they had never seen Chambers at the Hiss residence. May said Hiss' reputation was "excellent as far as I know."

Sayre, now United States Delegate to the United Nations Trusteeship Council, appeared as a defense witness in the second perjury trial of Hiss. Sayre was not asked to testify at the first trial.

Had Reputation "Of the Best"

Hiss is under an indictment alleging that he lied when he swore that he did not give secret State Department documents or copies of them to Whittaker Chambers in 1938 for transmission to a Communist spy ring. The first trial ended in a hung jury July 8.

Sayre said that up until Chambers made his public accusations against Hiss in August, 1948, the reputation of Hiss for loyalty, integrity and veracity was "of the best." Unlike other previous character witnesses who have appeared in both trials, Sayre pointed out, that the accusations against Hiss affected this reputation.

When he was asked the standard question for character witnesses, without mention of dates, he answered with some hesitation:

"Now, you mean? I am a little at a loss to answer because there have been so many opinions expressed. There are some who believe absolutely in the integrity of his character. There are others who do not. People fall into two different groups. It is difficult to give a sweeping opinion. May I give my own opinion?"

Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy objected that a character witness was limited to "quoting other people's gossip." Claude B. Cross, chief defense counsel, rephrased the question to apply only to the period before August 1, 1948.

Sayre answered: "Of the best . . . up to August 1, 1948, my answer is unqualified."

Lawyer Bought Her a Husband

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Mrs. Nichols Andrews

In Los Angeles, Claude B. Andrews, 54, an attorney, testified in a paternity suit filed against him by Mrs. Helene Nichols, 34, that he paid a man $500 to marry Mrs. Nichols. Andrews admitted intimacies with Mrs. Nichols, his former secretary, but denied fathering her baby. He said, in effect, that he bought the husband to legitimatize Mrs. Nichols' child

Victory Held Slowed by Aid Sent to Russia

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP).—Miss Vivien Kellems, Connecticut industrialist, said today that Allied victory in World War II was delayed "at least a year" because the United States sent Russia large supplies of electrical equipment.

She said the Russians used the equipment to build four atomic plants, and that "in all history no nation has ever been betrayed as was the United States."

Her remarks were prepared for delivery at a luncheon meeting of the Henry George School of Social Sciences.

She said the Roosevelt wartime Administration diverted American electrical supplies to the Soviet Union at the cost of American lives. She added:

"Had we concentrated on fighting the war we could have won the war at least one year sooner, and thousands of dead American boys would be alive today."

Now, as a result of recent reports that the Russians got atomic materials from the United States during the war, she believes her 1943 speech was "hotter than I knew then."

Never Saw Judy and Gubitchev Kiss, Hold Hands, G-Man Says

New York, Dec. 14 (AP)—The FBI man who arrested Judith Coplon and Valentin Gubitchev testified today he never saw them "kiss or embrace when they met, hold hands, or give any other outward sign of emotion."

Agent Robert Granville gave the testimony in answer to defense suggestions that the former Government girl and the Soviet engineer were engaged in a romance instead of a conspiracy to spy.

Granville was called as a witness in a pretrial hearin before Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan. Gubitchev's lawyer is asking Ryan to suppress as evidence the papers taken from the Russian when he was arrested. He also asks that Gubitchev's statements following his arrest be ruled out as evidence.

Granville testified he gave consideration to the possibility that Miss Coplon and Gubitchev were in love. But he said he gave up the idea because of the defendants' actions.

He said that when Gubitchev was questioned about Miss Coplon after the arrest, the Russian replied:

"Who is that woman? I don't know her."

She and Gubitchev now are to go on trial together December 27 on charges of conspiring to steal the papers.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today turned down a move by Gubitchev to get a new argument on his plea that he should be granted diplomatic immunity.

New Navy Planes Are Equipped to Hunt Submarines

The Navy said yesterday it has placed a 24-million-dollar contract for new "rough water" seaplanes designed primarily to detect submarines.

The order, described as an initial production contract, went to the Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore.

The new plane, said the Navy, will carry the latest electronic for submarine detection, including a prominent bow radar scanner."

Ready For Rescue

To no small degree, some of the 19 persons who survived Monday night's Capital Airlines crash may owe their lives to the advance preparations at Bolling Air Force Base. The crash ward at the station hospital had been equipped for just such an emergency. Fortunately, no long ambulance trip was necessary. When crash-boat crews brought in the passengers from the Potomac, oxygen, blood plasma and other necessary aids were available in the ward for immediate use. Injured persons also had the benefit of a mobile operations cart which could be moved between two beds, enabling two doctors to treat patients simultaneously. Furthermore, through admirable foresight the base surgeon, Maj. Howard R. Lawrence, had ready a list of civilian specialists in Washington whom he could call in for help. The wisdom of these precautions certainly has paid off. The cooperation of all Bolling Field personnel was a heartwarming thing, and it surely is the silver lining to an otherwise very grim event.

Wandering Continents

If you have had a feeling of aimlessly drifting recently, perhaps you can now blame it on the reflex of a deeply ingrained terrestrial law. No less an authority than Dr. Vannevar Bush has raised the possibility that continents may be constantly moving on the earth's crust. Experiments conducted by the Carnegie Institution's Department of Terrestrial Magnetism indicate that the earth has reversed its poles within the last 350 million years or so. Magnetic rocks found in Maryland, for example, lead to the hypothesis that south once was north. And since the effect of environment on personality is well established, who knows what subtle influence the drift of continents may have on human reactions?

All of this, to be sure, hardly warrants the question, "Where is our wandering continent tonight?" Continents are scarcely speed demons, and their movements are not likely to make much difference to anyone of more recent vintage than a dinosaur. But the new evidence does give currency to the old geological theory of continental drift. That theory holds, among other things, that South America and Africa were once joined, and a look at the respective bulges on the map makes it sound logical.

The practical problem now is how to exploit, control and speed up the movements. The aim, of course, should be to permit nations which don't like their neighbors to change their environment by merely moving away. We suggest this to our Russian friends who are constantly complaining about encirclement. Already they claim to be moving mountains by means of atomic energy.

Route To Montreal

A nice tangle has arisen over application of the Canadian-United States air agreement, and from all indications the mess will get worse before it gets better. The issue is simply whether United States airlines can continue to enjoy operating rights in Canada unless equivalent rights are accorded Canadian lines in the United States. Canada is now forcing a showdown, and though the method of the showdown is questionable, on grounds of equity the Canadian case seems to us unassailable.

The trouble arose shortly after the agreement was signed last June. Colonial Airlines, which since 1926 has had a monopoly of New York-Montreal air traffic, protested the plan to grant a duplicate route to Trans-Canada Airlines. The issue went to court, and although Colonial's suit was dismissed, an injunction was issued pending appeal. This injunction forbids the Civil Aeronautics Board to recommend that the President grant a route to Trans-Canada. Meanwhile the Canadian Air Transport Board summoned Colonial to show cause why its Montreal route should not be cancelled because it has delayed effectiveness of the air agreement.

It is questionable whether the air agreement envisions this sort of unilateral action, and we think the State Department is right in protesting the retaliation. Doubtless it was a similar consideration that inspired Chairman O'Connell of the Civil Aeronautics Board to agree with Senator Edwin Johnson's complaint that the Canadian move is a form of pressure on American courts. This is the sort of misunderstanding between friends that ought to be resolved immediately, and it is encouraging that intergovernmental consultations have begun in Ottawa.

On the larger issue, however, the Canadians are inescapably right, and it is not hard to understand how the injustice has festered in their minds. For while the litigation has been going on they have raised no question about the major concession to American lines at Gander, Newfoundland. It is true that the contemplated Trans-Canada route may entail some injury to Colonial—though it is also possible that the stimulus of competition will develop new traffic. But even if duplication should necessitate a higher subsidy for Colonial, this would be a small price to pay for American rights at Gander. The fact is that international aviation cannot be a one-way affair, and if the United States is to receive privileges elsewhere it must expect to reciprocate.

Security And Freedom

Much careful thinking about the United States' security program has gone into the report just released by the Research and Policy Committee of the Committee for Economic Development. Estimating the annual cost of rearmament and other security expenditures at home and abroad during the next few years at 20 billion dollars or more, the CED investigators find that the security program has become "a dangerous force in our society." Freedom is threatened by the magnitude of our security effort. "We have already given up important freedoms without adequate challenge," the report says. "Freedoms unexercised may be freedoms forfeited."

Of course, this does not mean that we should suddenly abandon rearmament, aid to Europe, and atomic development in a frantic effort to regain lost freedoms. The report makes it unmistakably plain, if any further emphasis on the point is needed, that our traditional liberties would be in infinitely greater danger if national security should be neglected. "Neither national security nor individual freedom can be absolute," says the report. We must necessarily seek both objectives and keep one well in balance with the other.

What the country needs, according to the CED, is more deliberate and positive measures for protecting the rights of citizens in this trying period. One source of danger is the increased power of the military in our national life. Governmental agencies are not adequately organized to keep rigid civilian control over the military. Nor are Congress and the public well enough informed to shape national policies intelligently. "Our Government is following a much more comprehensive program of secrecy," says the report, "than in any previous period when we were not at war . . . Great danger is inherent in a poorly informed public." Obviously the people and their representatives must have access to information out of which policies are shaped or self-government will die on the vine for want of nourishment.

There is danger, too, the CED finds, in the growth of bureaucracy, the increasing emphasis on loyalty, the burden of taxes on economic incentives, the control of business activity through governmental contracts, and the temptation to impose more direct controls over economic activity in the name of security. What it seeks, therefore, is a balanced program in which the necessity of buttressing our free society will be more heavily weighted.

In pursuit of this aim, the CED recommends that the National Security Council be developed as an agency through which the President can formulate and review comprehensive and balanced security policies. The council now consists of the President, Vice President, Secretary of State, Secretary of Defense, and chairman of the National Security Resources Board. It has not measured up to its enormous potentialities. The CED thinks the council could be greatly strengthened by the addition of three full-time civilians to its membership. The new members would have Cabinet rank and would presumably bring to the council strength and continuity of effort which it has not yet attained from the overworked officials who now constitute it. One of the full-time members would become a general assistant to the chairman; one would be given the special task of getting more information about security policies out to the public; and one would concern himself especially with protection of basic liberties that are endangered by the security program. Each of these suggestions seems to us admirable.

The recommendation for development of the National Resources Board also carries a strong appeal. We think there is less to be said, however, for the proposal to create a committee on national security in each house of Congress. Such committees would be designed to parallel on the congressional side the activities of the National Security Council. But apparently it is not designed that they should acquire direct jurisdiction over legislation. Would it not be better, in that event, to have the present committees concerned with the armed services and foreign affairs maintain a direct contact with the council? One or two representative members from each house might even be added to the council with beneficial effect, since its basic purpose is to advise the President on security policies. Certainly the congressional viewpoint ought to be reflected in such advice. There has long been need for a council of legislative advisers to aid in shaping the Administration's general legislative program. In a matter of such great importance as security policy, there is a very strong argument for the type of cooperation that will discourage executive-legislative stalemates.

Bill Of Rights

The men who drafted the Bill of Rights, adopted 158 years ago today as the first 10 amendments to the Constitution, subscribed to the political philosophy that governments are voluntarily instituted among men to secure certain "natural rights" and that they derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. Thus the government they created was one of limited powers. The Bill of Rights was designed as an explicit definition of some of the limits imposed. It protects certain areas of human behavior from governmental interference—even if such interference is sanctioned by majority consent of the governed.

Thus, no matter what the wishes of the electorate, Congress may make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble. The Federal Government may not conduct unreasonable searches and seizures, nor try any person for a capital or otherwise infamous crime without an indictment by a grand jury, nor deprive him of life, liberty or property without due process of law. These and other prohibitions enumerated in the Bill or Rights were designed to keep the newly created Federal Government within appropriate bounds.

With the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment shortly after the Civil War, the most important of these prohibitions became binding upon the States as well. Recent Supreme Court interpretations of the due process clause of this amendment have made the Federal Government, paradoxically, the champion and protector of the people against arbitrary State interference in the very areas from which it was itself barred by the Bill of Rights. Neither Congress nor any State Legislature may now make any law respecting an establishment of religion or abridging freedom of expression.

Despite these limitations on its powers, the Government of the United States has remained for more than a century and a half the strongest and most stable government on earth. Indeed, the limitations have been the wellspring of its strength. For they have made possible the diversity, the conflict of ideas, the realization of individual potentialities, the orderly adoption of political and economic change which are indispensable to the functioning of the democratic process and to the maintenance of a genuine national unity. The individual rights derived from the limitation of governmental powers are not, therefore, mere luxuries. They are utilitarian. They have served the American people magnificently well. And those who would diminish them today in the name of national security would do well to remember that they have been the essential source of security throughout this Nation's history.

Germans In Uniform

The reaction in Germany to suggestions attributed to American and British military leaders that German armed units be incorporated in the defense of western Europe provides a powerful warning against such a project. Dr. Konrad Adenauer, Chancellor of the Bonn Republic, started by disavowing any desire for a German army and progressed within a very few days to demanding that the Germans be accorded "equal rights" in any European defense organization. The Allies, Dr. Adenauer is reported to have told a party meeting of the Christian Democratic Union the other day, must ask themselves which is worse—a German contingent in a European army or the threat of Russia.

It is scarcely a month since Dr. Adenauer signed a pledge to prevent "re-creation of armed forces of any kind" in Germany. Now he presumes to dictate the terms upon which his government will cooperate with the powers that created it—and this immediately following definitive rejection of any German rearmament by President Truman and an injunction by the Western Allied High Commissioners against any further discussion of the subject. It must be recognized, of course, that the Russians are making an army of the so-called people's police in the Eastern Zone of Germany. But certainly remilitarization of Western Germany is not the right answer.

Considerations of expediency no less than considerations of principle weigh against the re-creation of a German army in any form. The political consequences would be disastrous, not alone in France, where it is generally recognized that no government could acquiesce in German rearmament and survive, but equally throughout the free world, where it would be interpreted as a cynical abdication of democratic principles and pretensions. To view the project in the most nakedly pragmatic terms, moreover, German military strength could not be trusted by the West. If the Russians held out German unity as bait, western German forces might turn upon their creators.

It is a different matter to suggest, as we have done before, that Germans be included in a European legion. But the prerequisite of a European legion is a much greater integration of Europe than has yet been achieved. And such a legion would no doubt present enormous practical difficulties if men of different nationalities were intermingled in it as they are, for example, in the French Foreign Legion. This is, we think, the only way Germans can safely be used in such a legion. Inclusion of Germans in divisional or even regimental units would be, in our view, extremely dangerous. It would amount to nothing less than a German army in disguise. German soldiers in a European army would be one thing. A German army might be a Trojan horse of a very different color.

Canadian Route

The position of Colonial airlines and its senatorial backers seems to be that Colonial shall have the right to fly planes between New York and Montreal, but that no Canadian company shall have the right to fly planes between Montreal and New York.

Was there ever a greater exhibition of impudent greed? It would be well to explain that Canadians, the most friendly people in the world, are like a lot of very upstanding Americans, and are not very likely to lie down on their backs because we are somewhat more numerous than they, and say, "oh, great Yanks who exclude us from New York, we wouldn't dare keep you out of Montreal." As the most powerful nation on earth, this country had better keep a sharp lookout on its manners. H. S. GOOLD.

"Stand-Pat Colonialism"

Your bold editorial of December 7 exposed two fundamental issues of colonial administration. The first consists of colonial policies and actual practice. The second involves the principle of the U. N. Charter.

One gets the impression from the editorial that there has been political, social and economic progress along democratic administration in British territories. What actually happened in West African dependencies has been to suppress already existing cultural patterns that were intrinsically democratic for incoherent imported policies; then to devote decades to uproot the "blooming blunder." Thus the indirect rule (imported) is being replaced by "local government"—a state which the people had attained long before the advent of British administration. The local government, however, must function under denials of democratic responsibilities. A specious progress!

Second, the editorial's argument against what appears as defiance by Britain and France is considerably weakened because it cannot be rationally maintained that a man who insists on his legal rights is defiant. When the Big Five drafted the U. N. Charter at San Francisco in 1945, European colonial powers, despite protests from smaller nations and organizations in the United States, deliberately excluded political information among their obligations.

There will be no real progress, nor can Truman's Point 4 be effectively applied in the underdeveloped areas unless political equality or U. N. supervision is extended to these territories. For a constitutional solution, the United States opinion is essential. The dilemma confronting the General Assembly calls for a revision of the Charter in order to unfetter the U. N. so that those democratic ideals we stand for could be world-wide.

"General Welfare"

The December 4 letter of Wade H. Cooper on Federal taxation, commenting on Mark Sullivan's article of November 26, seems to make a great deal of the absence from the body of the United States Constitution of the phrase of the preamble "promote the general welfare." In view of the fact that Congress is given power to tax "to provide for the . . . general welfare," however, it is difficult to see what is gained by this distinction without a difference. J. H. G.

General Clay Fund

I called attention a year ago to the General Clay Fund for German children. That plan of assistance and rehabilitation is being continued.

Our Army of Occupation has established some 300 youth centers in the American zone. They are being used by more than 800,000 German children. They are maintained by voluntary subscriptions. The importance of the work they are doing cannot be overestimated. Through them these youngsters, nearly a million in numbers, are given the opportunity to study and to learn the American way of life.

At Hot Springs, Va., recently General Clay said: "The German nation is composed of 65 million people in the heart of Europe. They may go east. They want to go west. They need a helping hand."

General Huebner, who succeeded General Clay in command of our military forces in Germany, says: "The GYA programs are a little bit of America transferred to Germany. They are worth more than all the books, all the ambassadors, all the writings you can put out."

The donations now sought do not constitute charity. They will not be used for food. They will purchase materials for every character of workmanship to be carried on at the youth centers. They will thus help the German children to help themselves.

This year, as last, the plea of the General Clay Fund is for CARE packages for distribution through our Army on Christmas Day. These packages have been assembled with a particular view to the most immediate and pressing needs. They are already in Germany. As fast as the money is received here, the packages are released by wire. Donations to the fund are deductible for tax purposes. Checks should be made to CARE, Inc., earmarked for the General Clay Fund and sent either to the CARE offices here at Washington or to me at the National Press Building.

Advertising And The A&P Suit

The recent refusal of The Washington Post to publish an advertisement in support of the United States suit against the A. & P. raises an important public issue. Readers of The Post have seen full-page advertisements by the grocery chain expounding its position and attacking the antitrust suit. They have also seen in your columns somewhat less vivid expositions of the A. & P.'s defense, as by the Rennies. Why should your readers be denied the opportunity to read a presentation of the Government's case?

I think that you will agree with me that the A. & P. had been the subject of an adverse judgment by the Federal Trade Commission regarding its business practices. There was no mention, either, that the A. & P. had not too long ago been found guilty in a criminal action brought under the antitrust laws, and had paid a substantial fine.

Even if the A. & P. advertisements contained undiluted truth, which is far from the case, and even if the position of the Government and of the businessmen supporting the Government were completely false, I should still be opposed to your denial of expression to the Government's position. John Stuart Mill stated an important principle 90 years ago in his book On Liberty.

"The peculiar evil of silencing the expression of an opinion is, that it is robbing the human race; posterity as well as the existing generation; those who dissent from the opinion, still more than those who hold it. If the opinion is right, they are deprived of the opportunity of exchanging error for truth: if wrong, they lose, what is almost as great a benefit, the clearer perception and livelier impression of truth, produced by its collision with error."

The Post has given as its reason for not permitting the publication of the advertisement in favor of the antitrust suit that it cannot permit one advertiser to attack another. This strikes me as puerile. No reader would expect The Post to allow one advertiser to attack another advertiser's canned tomatoes or hair oil. But most readers would find it casuistic to extend this principle to the important Government action in which the A. & P. is presently involved.

The result is that the grocery chain has perfect freedom to attempt to mobilize public opinion in its favor, while the groups supporting the Government case are deprived of a chance to reply. I am afraid that some people would conclude that a habitual and large-scale advertiser is free to present in your columns its side of a controversy, but that no one else can participate. Thus, you deprive your readers of the chance to hear both sides before making up their minds.
THOMAS B. LARSON.
McLean, Va.

Editor's Note: Mr. Larson is wholly wrong as to why the advertisement of the National Federation of Independent Business was not printed. In an Associated Press story, published in The Washington Post on November 12, 1949, Publisher Philip L. Graham said: "The Washington Post rejected the advertisement because it seemed possibly libelous. We give the widest latitude to advertisers in expression of opinion because we consider this a proper responsibility of newspapers. Because of this responsibility, we have in recent years printed advertisements ranging from Gerald L. K. Smith to Paul Robeson. We do not think, however, that our responsibility requires the printing of possibly libelous matter. If the advertisement is rewritten to cure this defect we shall be glad to print it."

Of course, the usual advertising rule prohibiting one advertiser from attacking another's commercial products cannot be applied to "public opinion" advertising. On numerous occasions, as our readers will recall, The Washington Post has published public opinion advertising containing directly opposing points of view.

On November 26, 1949, a letter from the National Federation of Independent Business rebutting the Rennies' column and stating the Federation's position in the A. & P. case was published on the editorial page of The Washington Post. Those factors of the Government's case which Mr. Larson considers salient were fully brought out in our editorial of September 26. We believe these instances, as well as our general journalistic record, indicate awareness of our responsibility to present "both sides" of public issues.

Perennial Mob Scene

By Malvina Lindsay

Shopping Riddle

THE QUESTION that annually fascinates and confounds everyone except a few hardy extroverts who enjoy having their fellow men breathing down their necks arises again as the Christmas shopping madhouse reaches its maddest stage. It is: Why doesn't somebody do something about this?

If last year is any guide, the traffic jam in stores, on sidewalks and streets from Knobtown to New York should reach its peak within the next day or so. "Shop early" education has merely moved the rush ahead a week or 10 days.

Adding somewhat to the confusion this year is the fact that "disposable personal income," as the experts call it, is about 2 percent below last year. Also a mood of careful buying prevails. From throughout the country comes word that shoppers are seeking lower-priced merchandise, less-expensive gifts. Yet they are buying. Merchants believe unit, if not dollar, volume may hold up to last year's. This means more people shopping around.

Social as well as financial trends of the day are reflected in these pre-Christmas mobs. One is the scramble to buy television sets. This holds prophecy for the future of the industry, of the pattern of American home life. Crowds in toy departments, children's clothing sections, reveal what a huge new generation is on the way. Most department stores still rate lingerie at the top of Christmas merchandise, showing the feminine glamour cult is still holding its own. The word "nylon" in garments, as well as hose, retains its magic, and a shortage threatens in some places. Yet generally speaking the trend to practical buying of the last few years continues.

THE JAMS, headaches, sore feet, fatigue, frustration, confusion, continue from year to year—or possibly grow worse. "Why do we do it?" shoppers ask, as they have been asking for the last hundred years. Yes, surely it seems that American efficiency would do something about this pre-Christmas madness.

Yet only dyed-in-the-wool Scrooges can escape it. Meetings have been called, organizations formed throughout the years for sensible Christmas giving, for better-planned shopping, and have gotten nowhere. Individuals have taken vows to emancipate themselves from the mockery of adult gift exchange, or have resolved to go in for gift certificates, savings bonds or greenbacks. Cynics have declaimed against Christmas "infantilism." But most persons end up in the downtown fray shortly before Christmas Eve.

The merchants' answer to the problem is always "early shopping." Yet the Christmas rush was on even before Thanksgiving, and in these days of cautious inventories Christmas stocks cannot be expected in October even if human nature were ready for them.

Shoppers complain of the shortage of service in stores and the lack of trained personnel. This has been a shopping frustration in all fields of purchasing since wartime. This season complaints have been long and loud in many places about not finding merchandise wanted and of inability to get waited on.

MERCHANTS say the public's "tight buying" of the last two years has helped bring about this condition. Stocks in most lines have been bought cautiously—even for Christmas. And extra help has been taken on gingerly.

A preholiday survey several weeks ago by the Retail News Bureau showed that only 8 percent of stores planned to be more heavily staffed for the holiday rush, that 34 percent would get along with fewer workers than last Christmas, and 58 percent would maintain equal staffs. As Christmas buying began to pick up, many stores rushed in new recruits. But they lacked time to train them properly.

The hangover of wartime attitudes when a sellers' market prevailed has helped make the 1949 Christmas rush strenuous. In some cases, new untrained employes still have wartime delusions of grandeur. Some employers want profits approaching those of wartime's carelessly spent money.

The present Christmas shopping marathon does point up what has been said so often recently by business leaders, that better salesmanship is the answer to many of the country's economic problems. Some high schools are now teaching salesmanship with effective results. But no doubt many salespeople think that classes for shoppers as well are urgently needed.

One-World Living

A story goes that a king asked one of his wise men for a statement that would always be true. The wise man—who was truly wise—responded with "This, too, shall pass away." Change is the unchanging factor of life.

Instead of expending their energies, vociferously and vainly protesting against inevitable social mutations, the leaders among those who profit most from the status quo—the teachers, the ministers, the businessmen of our community—might far better devote themselves to learning, and encouraging others to learn, the techniques, already established, for living together in this One World that rushes on apace—even to Washington.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

U. S. And Asia

LONDON.—An American traveling in Southern Asia must feel, I think, how quickly he is expected to make up his mind about things which are new and strange to him. For only a very few far-sighted men can have anticipated even dimly that after the war the United States would find itself called upon to play so important a role from Turkey to Indonesia. Certainly few of us expected it.

Lippmann

For half a century and until about two years ago it was the accepted view that the sphere of American interest in Asia was in the Pacific and north of the equator—that American vital interests in the Far East had to do with China, Japan and the Philippines. In all the rest of Asia, except of course the Russian part of it, the British Commonwealth and empire was the predominant power, enveloping and protecting the French, the Dutch, and the small remnants of the Portuguese, empires in Asia.

DURING the Second World War this broad division of influence and interest persisted. Roosevelt took the lead in the Far East which, for military as well as diplomatic purposes, included the Balkans and North Africa to the borders of Tunis. But two unanticipated developments have altered this division of responsibility. The one was the liquidation of the British Empire in Asia, which brought in its train the liquidation of the Dutch Empire and it is certain, the French and the Portuguese Empires as well. The other unforeseen development was the failure of the American hope that Chiang Kai-shek and the Kuomintang would unify China after the Japanese evacuated it.

This radical change in the political order of Asia was long in the making. But it was consummated in two brief years—in the period between Mr. Bevin's insistence that Britain could no longer carry on in Greece and the flight of Chiang Kai-shek from the mainland of China.

The combined effect has been to break the established connections between the Atlantic community and that vast region of the globe where live about two thirds of the human race.

IT IS only in China, however, that a new power has established itself which intends to achieve its destiny in alliance with the Soviet Union and apart from the community of Atlantic nations. The destiny of Southern Asia from Indonesia to Turkey and Egypt is still undetermined.

The question is whether in this region, where the Western influence has so long been predominantly British, the United States—which is powerful but not omnipotent, rich but not inexhaustibly rich, influential but uninformed and uneducated in Asia—whether the United States can play a beneficent and effective part.

CAN THE United States help to find new connections based not upon empire but on the principle of equality, now that the old imperial connections between Asia and the Atlantic community have been destroyed? The one certainty in this formidable undertaking is that no new connections can be formed which will endure if the Americans appear in Asia as the heirs and successors of the old empires. The problem is complicated for us by the fact that the very same nations which in Europe are the leading democracies, and our close allies, have been east of Suez the empires against which all of Asia is in rebellion.

In this confusing duality our surest guide is a firm remembrance, whatever the cynical and the worldly wise may say, that the United States were themselves colonies that rebelled, and a firm attachment to our own traditions, even prejudices, against colonialism and imperialism.

We can and should, of course, learn from all who have had a longer experience in these parts of the world. But in so far as America is to work with the living forces of Asia, it must do so by direct contact and not through intermediaries.

WE SHALL make mistakes. But they will be less costly if we make them ourselves than if we make them through our allies in Europe. Let us hope that we shall not be misunderstood in Europe, indeed that the wiser Europeans will see that if good relations are to exist between Asia and the West, the best hope lies in the fact that America is the first world power which is not an empire and that it has no imperial past to be forgotten. That may make it possible to work out a new system of connections.

Until we became entangled with Chiang Kai-shek in dealings alien to the American tradition the nonimperialist power of the United States was the source of our prestige and influence in China. We must now discourage completely all those at home and abroad who, with more zeal than insight, would have us repeat elsewhere, particularly in India, the lamentable story of our last years in China.

IT WILL help to clarify our own approach if we recognize that the regions of Asia which are most vulnerable to Communist domination are those which were conquered and occupied by Japan. The fact of the matter is that though Japan was defeated by the United States, China and all of Southeast Asia were defeated by Japan. They were not liberated or reconquered by their original rulers. These countries were merely evacuated after the Japanese Emperor surrendered unconditionally to General MacArthur. When the Japanese went out of China, Indo-China, Siam, Malaya and Indonesia, there were left behind governments which had lost authority and prestige. Among the people there were left the arms abandoned by the Japanese. There were also the arms furnished by us to the guerillas in order to fight the Japanese. And there was left the ineradicable belief that the Japanese, though they had been brutal masters, were nevertheless Asiatics who had fought brilliantly with the cry of Asia for the Asiatics.

Neither the local Communists nor the Soviet agents have undermined the social order in these countries. They are exploiting the disorder which remained after the Japanese had destroyed the prestige and the power of the old order. Where the Japanese did not enter, where the war did not undermine the social system and the government, communism is as yet a nuisance and a provocation rather than a threat. Turkey, a successful neutral, Pakistan and India, which were successfully defended, are today the least vulnerable countries in Asia. They have their grave problems and difficulties. But communism is not their main problem nor even a very important problem. It is from them and with them and through them, primarily, that a new order of connections between East and West may, one may hope, be formed.

Bulgaria Frustrates U. S. Diplomats

THE STATE Department's rebuke to Bulgaria was long overdue. It is not alone in China that American diplomats are subjected to deliberate humiliations and hardships.

Childs

Part of their job in these unhappy times is to stand up to the continuous hounding that is a phase of the cold war. But the question must always be under review as to whether it is worth it in practical returns to this country. In Bulgaria it seems to me very likely that the answer is: No.

While they were not spelled out in detail by the State Department, the harassments to which our diplomats in Sofia have been subjected are extraordinarily petty and mean. The Bulgarian government is denying license plates to the few cars owned by the American Legation. This means, as the licenses expire, that it becomes increasingly difficult merely to get around the city and perform the minimum of official duties.

FUEL for heating homes and apartments occupied by Americans has been withheld or doled out in such small quantities as to make existence hardly endurable. One of the younger members on the staff of American Minister Donald Heath lived through last winter with his wife and small child in one partially heated room and water was rationed to the extent that it was for several months turned on only an hour a day, from 5 a. m. to 6 a. m.

While it is true that most of the population was living at this same wretched level, the tradition always has been for diplomats living in foreign land to be given some special privileges. Satellite representatives in Washington get every diplomatic privilege.

Bulgarian secret police harried the neighbors of the family mentioned above to such an extent that the neighbor's children were forbidden to speak to the small son of the American household. Violation of this prohibition would have meant that the father and mother would be promptly clapped into jail.

That illustrates the kind of Ghetto in which American representatives in the satellite capitals are forced to live. It often has seemed to me that we have been too unaware and too unappreciative of the sacrifices being made by the men and women in these grim outposts.

If it pays off in intelligence and needed materials, then it is worth it. A glance at the Bulgarian-United States balance sheet indicates that we are getting very little in return for the money and the energy expended in keeping a legation open in Sofia.

DURING the past nine months Bulgaria got from this country $186,500 in industrial materials, office appliances and chemical and related products. These are all the kind of goods desperately wanted in the satellite states. In addition, Bulgaria imported from America $797,000 in raw cotton.

In return the United States got from Bulgaria $1,087,000 in tobacco and $148,000 in essential oils, mostly attar of roses for perfume. Surely, these are not very important items and in all probability the same type of tobacco could be obtained in Greece.

The matter of intelligence gained from the mission in Sofia is more difficult for the outsider to appraise. In general, it has seemed to me that there is always an advantage in recognition and a disadvantage in the sterile policy of nonrecognition.

But if our diplomats are to be narrowly confined in a diplomatic ghetto and constantly spied upon and harassed, then the amount of information to be obtained may not be worth the cost and sacrifice. This applies not only to Bulgaria but to Romania and perhaps also to Hungary.

In any event, the time has come, in my opinion, to serve notice on the satellite regimes that they must give our representatives a semblance of fair play or the mission will be closed and their diplomats here sent back home. That might have a salutary effect. The need for the kind of goods that can be obtained only from the United States is indeed desperate.

Without stooping to the miserable tactics of dictatorship, we cannot apply the same restrictions on satellite diplomats here. They move about freely from one part of the country to the other. If the persecution persists, the only recourse may be to break off relations with regimes that behave like thugs and stool pigeons.

Office-Type Ballot Adopted by Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Ohio Supreme Court ruled today Ohioans adopted the office-type ballot in the election last November 8.

The new ballot, grouping candidates by the office they seek, supplants the party-column ballot grouping together all the candidates of one party.

The change means that Ohioans no longer may mark an "x" at the top of a ballot column and thereby vote for every candidate listed thereon, from coroner to United States Senator.

The new ballot lists the party affiliation beside the candidate's name. The voter must mark an "x" beside the name of each candidate he favors.

The Supreme Court had to decide whether the new ballot, set up in a constitutional amendment, required a majority of the votes cast on the issue, or a majority of all the votes cast a majority of the

It ruled that a majority of the votes cast on the issue was sufficient. The vote was 1,007,693 for adoption and 750,206 against.

Aid Agencies' Funds Drained As Needs Rise, Needy Wait agencies for emergency relief are told, "Figure out your own answer. We just haven't got the money."

Families Breaking Up

"There is evidence," Kruse said, "of substantial breakup among families needing emergency relief. People become discouraged. Their world has become so unsatisfactory they say 'To hell with it!' and lose their sense of family responsibility. Then the community has to pick it up.

"The inability of the Public Welfare Department to help extreme cases where no employable person is available to support the family has brought tremendous pressure on Chest-supported agencies for emergency relief until the Public Welfare Department is able to examine the problem and provide assistance."

Jelleff said seven Chest-supported Washington agencies have spent about $150,000 so far this year in emergency relief for food, clothing and shelter. These agencies are Catholic Charities, Family Service Association, Jewish Social Service, Salvation Army, Travelers Aid, American Legion Welfare Department and the Shoe and Rubber Fund.

Can Help Less Than Half

"Requests for financial assistance now coming to Chest-supported agencies," Jelleff said, "exceed available funds so much that financial help can be provided for less than one half of needy cases. These are individuals who are aged or sick, children, and women who are the sole support of their families. They can do nothing more to help themselves than they are doing, and must depend upon the community for the basic essentials of life."

Kruse asserted the present Public Welfare budget is so inadequate that relief grants are approximately 40 percent below current food costs. The UCS executive committee last month approved the Public Welfare Board's 1951 budget recommendations "insofar as these permit some increase in present low relief payments by elimination of the 12 percent cut in grants, allowance for a rise in case of 700, and additional staff to overcome the three-to-five-week lag at intake."

At the same time, UCS pointed to the need for additional funds in the welfare budget to permit raising grants to the basis of current living costs, rather than those in 1946; allowance for special dietary needs for persons who are ill, and "the easing of the requirement which forces mothers to go to work, providing some arrangement for the care of the children can be made."

of its Bureau of German Affairs last Thursday to discuss "unimportant technical matters," it said. No question of a loan was discussed, it said, branding any such talk as "ridiculous," nor was the matter of the committee of standstill creditors of Germany. This group of American bankers is concerned with about 30 million dollars owed Americans by Germans and frozen by a series of moratoria starting in 1931.

Consuls Act on Own Authority

The State Department explained that its consuls, under the law, grant visas on their own authority unless they deem it necessary to seek the advice of Washington in questionable cases. This was not done in the case of Abs, it said, and thus no record of his visa application in Germany is available here yet.

The fact that the consul had granted the visa without consulting the department, it said, indicated that he had all necessary papers and clearances and that he was traveling as a private citizen. It conceded that Abs had been a close advisor to Hitler, but said it understood he never had been a member of the Nazi Party.

'Silent Night' Was Written After Mice Ate Organ Bellows

Oberndorf, Austria, Dec. 14 (U.P.).

"Silent night, holy night
"All is calm, all is bright . . ."

This most popular of all Christmas carols was written because mice ate the bellows of the church organ here 131 years ago.

It was in December, 1818, that the rodents did their work in the small Catholic Church of St. Nikolaus in this village in the Salzach Valley.

The parish priest, 26-year-old Father Joseph Mohr, was desperate. What would a Christmas without music be like for his parishioners, mostly bargemen who ship salt from the nearby mines down the Salzach River?

Mohr took his problem to his friend, Schoolteacher Franz Xavier Gruber. Gruber played the organ in the little church and knew how much music meant to the men and women, and particularly the children, of the village. Together they went to work.

On Christmas Eve, the two men had completed a simple but moving carol. It was simple because it had to be sung by the two men, a tenor and a baritone, and accompanied by Mohr's guitar.

They sang their new carol for the little congregation that night at midnight mass. The bargemen and farmers liked it. The children liked it.

"I am proud of you. People will sing your song long after we both are dead," Mrs. Gruber told her happy husband that night on their way home from church.

Shortly before Christmas the next year an organ builder came to the little town to check the church organ. Gruber, testing the repairs, began to play the carol. Father Mohr began to sing the words and Gruber joined in. The organ builder, his name long since forgotten, was as impressed as the congregation. He copied the song and played it as he went from village to village repairing organs for the coming holiday.

He carried the song from the rolling hills and valley of Salzach near the German Austrian border to the little town of Zillertahl high in the Tyrolean Alps. Here two brothers and two sisters, glovemakers and singers, heard and loved the song.

In 1831 the four Tyrolean singers sang it at a church service at the Leipzig Fair. They were asked to sing it again at the local concert house. The carol was on its way around the world.

Father Mohr died in a tiny hamlet in the Alps in 1848. He did not leave enough money to pay for his burial. Fifteen years later his friend Gruber followed him, unrecognized.

Floods raged down the Salzach Valley at the turn of the century and destroyed the Church of Saint Nikolaus and almost wiped out the town of Oberndorf. However, donations from music lovers all over the world raised a little chapel outside the new town of Oberndorf on the site of the old church.

This Christmas Eve, as on almost every Christmas Eve since it was written, the simple carol will be sung by a tenor and a baritone—simple people, the town butchers—in the chapel marking its birthplace.

Expedition to Seek Pirate Treasure

Kingston, Jamaica, Dec. 14 (AP). A 30-man expedition plans to sail from here January 1 in the 236-ton ship Explorer to hunt for the fabulous "loot of Lima" on lonely Cocos island.

The leader of the expedition claims new knowledge of the pirate treasure reportedly hidden on the uninhabited Pacific island 550 miles west of the Panama Canal.

Paintings by Descendant of Brahmins, Now Resident Of Bombay, to Be Shown at Arts Club Until January 8

Paintings by a descendant of Brahmins converted to Catholicism by St. Francis Xavier 400 years ago were shown yesterday at the Arts Club of Washington, 2017 I st. nw. The exhibit will continue until January 8.

The paintings are the work of Miss Angela Trindad of Bombay, and include both secular and religious subjects.

Miss Trindad is making her first visit to the United States at the invitation of Mother Dengl, M. D., founder of the Medical Mission Sisters, whose motherhouse is in Philadelphia.

Miss Trindad's Portuguese name, she explains, is due to the fact that at time of the conversions in Goa, Portuguese India, by St. Francis Xavier, those converted took Western names.

Studied in Bombay

Miss Trindad's father left the 200-year-old ancestral home at Goa, where there were no art schools, to study in Bombay. Painting in Western style, Antonio Xavier Trindad became so successful that he was called "the Rembrandt of the East."

His family had discouraged his being an artist, because they did not think it quite respectable for people of their station in life. In turn, Miss Trinidad's father discouraged her at first, because of the lack of financial reward.

"But he finally gave in, and before he died he told me that I would be greater than he was, but I should learn never to think too much of myself, and to keep on learning all my life. And so, I want to learn more and find new ways of expressing myself."

Paints in Both Styles

Like her father, Miss Trinidad began painting in Western style "because we were made to feel that the Eastern style was inferior," but with the awakening of national self-consciousness through Tagore and others, she began to paint in the Indian style, too.

Striking, in this later style, are her religious pictures with almond-eyed Madonnas and brown-skinned Christ Childs. Also new is Miss Trinidad's use of "mudras"—symbolic hand gestures traditional to Indian and Buddhist art. "The poor people there understand mudras easily," she explained.

Md. U. Freshman Wins In Cattle Judging

By The Associated Press

Thomas O. Meredith, jr., University of Maryland freshman from Queen Anne, swept the field in its annual cattle judging contest, the university's Block and Bridle Club announced last night.

Meredith took all the top prizes in the contest December 9 in which 22 other college students competed.

He won four cups for being the highest individual judge in the show, highest freshman, highest dairy judge and highest livestock judge.

The announcement was made at the club's annual banquet in honor of collegiate and 4-H judging teams.

Reds to Run Scientists Out of Ivory Towers

Moscow, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Soviet Academy of Science has a plan to get Russian scientists out of their ivory towers.

Scientists in 1950 are to be assigned to getting out of their laboratories for a certain length of time. They are to spend the interval on farms, out in the fields, in workshops.

The purpose is to bring scientists into closer contact with the practical side of the theoretical problems they study, and at the same time to bring the worker into closer touch with science.

Chicago U. Admits High School Boy To Graduate Work

Chicago, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—The University of Chicago today reported that a former Bronx, N. Y., high school student has achieved the well-nigh impossible.

He demonstrated in entrance examinations that he already has the equivalent of a college education and was passed on immediately to graduate work.

The boy was 17-year-old Donald E. Nelson, who studied at the Bronx High School for a year and a half. He also studied for 18 months at the Institute Giovanni Verga in Rome, where his father, Claude D. Nelson, is an official of the YMCA.

Chicago will accept students who have completed only two years of high school, but imposes sweeping entrance examinations on all.

British Protestants Ask State To Set Gambling Restrictions

London, Dec. 14 (AP).—Britain's Potestant churches called on the government today to place drastic restrictions on all forms of gambling, one of the nation's multi-million dollar industries.

But the Anglican Bishop of London admitted churches do some gaming themselves.

Their views were presented to a royal commission on betting, gaming and lotteries, set up to consider whether the gambling laws should be tightened.

They said foootball pools should be prohibited, horse and dog racing run for the sport alone, and gambling on the stock market eliminated entirely.

"The church does not come before the commission with completely clean hands," Bishop J. W. C. Wand told the commission.

". . . if the state has something to be sorry for we realize that we have that same necessity for penitence ourselves."

Many English churches conduct whist drives, draws for prizes at charity bazaars and similar games of chance to raise church funds.

The Protestant memorandum said if horse race betting can't be eliminated every effort should be made to limit betting to that which takes place at the track.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY'S SCHOOL PROBLEM

AGNES E. MEYER

Mrs. Meyer

What problems were thrown at Montgomery County parents, taxpayers and educators by the 50 percent increase in school enrollment in the past five years? What has the county done about these problems? What is it doing right now? What can it afford to do in the future?

Agnes E. Meyer, known for her brilliant and sympathetic analyses of social problems, has spent six weeks in an exhaustive investigation into the problems of Montgomery County's schools. In the first of two articles, last Sunday, she told of Montgomery's skyrocket population growth and the terrific load carried by the teachers because of inadequate facilities.

In the second article this Sunday, Mrs. Meyer discusses whether even wealthy Montgomery County can finance the extensive school construction with which it is obviously faced for years to come.

Nothing so affects the pocketbook of the taxpayer, the interests of the parent, and the future of the county as this subject of Montgomery's schools. Be sure to read this final article—ask your newsdealer to save you a Sunday Post, or phone NAtional 4200 for Post home delivery.

$600,000 Fund For Jobless Asked by Lane

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 14 (AP).—Governor Lane will ask the Legislature to appropriate $300,000 from the State surplus Saturday for unemployment relief.

In making that announcement tonight, the Governor explained that the administration bill would call for matching funds from the counties and cities.

He said the money would be used to "extend coverage of the State Department of Welfare assistance program for a temporary period; provide for individual families who are in need primarily because of unemployment and who have been excluded under the department's regulations."

The Governor did not elaborate on that statement.

Saturday's special General Assembly session was called originally to correct a technical error which invalidated a 50-million-dollar school bond bill.

Since the special session call went out last week, Senate minority leader Kimble (R., Allegany) has announced he will submit bills of his own to provide additional money for public welfare.

There are some 23,000 Maryland unemployed who have exhausted all jobless benefits to which they are entitled for the relief year ending next March 31.

Under Department of Welfare regulations, these persons are not eligible for public assistance checks.

The situation was brought to a focus last week with the disclosure that almost every resident of Shallmar, a small western Maryland mining town, was destitute. Most were living on a starvation diet.

There had not been work for the able-bodied of the town since the mine there closed down for lack of orders last March.

The $600,000 which would be made available for extra relief under the administration bill would be used to ease the statewide situation until the Legislature convened in regular session next February.

Senator Kimble was not immediately available for comment on whether he would still press for passage Saturday of his own measures.

Before the Governor's announcement, Senate President Byrnes (D., Balto. 5th) had predicted the session would last but a few hours.

"I fully expect it to be over by late afternoon," Byrnes said.

Lane asked the Legislature to convene at 11 a. m. Saturday to act on the school loan, invalidated last month by the Court of Appeals because of a technical error. A spokesman in the executive office said a couple of hours should be enough to accomplish that.

ADA Session Set Saturday At Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 14 (AP).—The entire delegation to this weekend's quarterly meeting of the national board of Americans for Democratic Action will be housed in private homes because of the racial segregation policies of Baltimore hotels.

William Boucher 3d, president of the Baltimore ADA chapter, explained the decision was made after the hotels refused accommodations to three prominent Negro ADA delegates.

They are William H. Hastie, former Governor of the Virgin Islands and now a judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Philadelphia; George Weaver, assistant to the national secretary-treasurer of the CIO, and B. F. McLaurin, national president of the Pullman and Sleeping Car Porters Union (AFL).

ADA is a political organization formed two years ago to further the liberal aims of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is a firm supporter of President Truman's civil rights program.

At the quarterly meeting here, plans for the ADA's national convention next April in Washington will be discussed as well as political policy for the 1950 congressional elections.

Scheduled to attend as delegates and to address a Saturday night public meeting are Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), national chairman of the organization; Howard Lindsay, playwright; Lillian Smith, novelist; Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, noted Protestant clergyman and professor at the Union Theological Seminary; Prof. Arthur Schlesinger, jr., of Howard University, and Charles M. LaFollette, ADA national director and former Republican Congressman from Indiana.

Sea Island, Ga., Dec. 14 (AP).—Vice President and Mrs. Alben Barkley returned to their honeymoon retreat off the Georgia coast today.

They plan to leave tomorrow for Miami, where the Veep is to address a Jefferson-Jackson Day banquet Saturday.

The couple is scheduled to come back to Sea Island Dec. 20 and remain here through Christmas. Mrs. Barkley's two daughters, now in St. Louis, will join them at Sea Island for the Yule holidays.

Razor-Wielding GI Cuts Tokyo Diplomat

Tokyo (Thursday) Dec. 15 (U.P.).—A Swiss diplomat and two Americans were injured when a razor-wielding GI and his buddy, irked because they were "snootily" denied dances, broke up a diplomatic party, complaints to Gen. Douglas MacArthur revealed today.

MacArthur's diplomatic section disclosed receipt of protest letters from two European missions in Tokyo complaining that the two American soldiers attacked a party of diplomats from Sweden, Denmark, Belgium and Switzerland in the plush Gajoen Trader Hotel on December 2.

4 From Catholic U. in College Who's Who

O. K. Norman, of the Bureau of Public Roads, was one of four men honored by the Highway Research Board yesterday.

Some 700 persons are attending the four-day sessions of the board's twenty-ninth annual meeting, concluding Friday, at the National Academy of Sciences building, 2101 Constitution ave. nw.

Norman, chief of the bureau's section of traffic operations, and Kenneth B. Woods, professor of highway engineering at Purdue University, received the High-Highway Research Board's Distinguished Service Award for outstanding achievement in research over the years.

A paper presented by H. N. Hveem and R. M. Carmany of the California Division of Highways, on "The Factors Underlying the Rational Design of Pavements," at the board's 1948 annual meeting, also won an award. Presentation of the citations was made by F. V. Reagel, chairman of the board.

J. A. Anderson, Virginia highways commissioner and first vice president of the American Association of State Highway Officials, said "four billion dollars is a conservative estimate of American highway needs."

"In solving our highway problems, we need the kind of leadership our country gave us in World War II," he said. "If it was done under the stimulus of war, isn't it possible now?"

Roy E. Jorgensen, deputy commissioner and chief engineer of the Connecticut State Highway Department, in a paper on "financing a Nation-wide highway program," placed the figure needed for meeting accumulated and current needs in the next 15 years at 4.4 billion dollars.

"This represents an increase of about 1.4 billion dollars over funds currently available from all sources," Jorgensen said. "Expansion of Federal-aid authorizations can be anticipated, and a continuation of past trends will result in increased aid from State revenues rather than an expansion of local financing."

line and provide a bypass for traffic around Washington.

"But it doesn't answer in full our problem of direct access into the District from Montgomery County," commented Blair Lee 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

District Highway Department officials withheld comment, but indicated they, too, still want a road to the District line. They point out that a metropolitan area transportation study, to be ready in six or eight months, will indicate the exact point where the new highway should reach the District. The military, too, is interested in a through road for evacuation purposes in case of emergency or war. But nearby Montgomery County communities have fought any such highway which would have to run through their fast filling-up area.

Baltimore-Washington Parkway—Representative Fallon (D., Md.) announced yesterday the Budget Bureau has approved his plan to transfer the Jessup, Md.-District line part of the parkway to the National Park Service. He said Interior Secretary Chapman also approved the plan.

One Section Under Way

Fallon feels this will make it easier to obtain money from Congress next year to complete that part of the road on which nothing is now being done. Maryland is working on the section from Baltimore to Jessup.

Annapolis-Washington Expressway—There won't be any expressway unless the Federal Government steps in with more money. This became apparent yesterday after a statement by State Roads Chairman Robert M. Reindollar that the State has no money to build the road from the new Chesapeake Bay Bridge, now getting started, to the District line. He said the State will finish the 10-mile section now under construction around Annapolis to the Crain hwy. (Route 301). But travelers to and from the Eastern Shore will continue to use the inadequate Defense hwy. the rest of the way to the District.

It had been planned to bring the new expressway to the District, tying it in with the Baltimore Parkway at a Kenilworth interchange about at the iDstrict line.

Peter the Great's Will

How the "ideal of a Russian world empire" was outlined in the will of Peter the Great was told to the National Capital Optimist Club at its Continental Hotel luncheon yesterday by Melvin Hildreth, attorney, Democratic national committeeman and student of the Russian Czar's will, first heard of in 1811.

16 Still Missing In Ship Explosion

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 15 (U.P.).—The Coast Guard here said the SS Williamsburg, bound for Philadelphia, picked up six crew members of the Dutch cargo vessel Doros at 11:36 p. m. The Coast Guard said one man had died and was buried at sea.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 14 (AP).—A story of horror and death aboard a blazing Dutch motor vessel was unfolded by seven weary survivors today as Coast Guard planes and vessels scanned the Atlantic for 16 others still missing.

Eight survivors—one a badly burned stretcher case — were landed here in a Coast Guard PBM rescue plane. The plane had picked them up from the American tanker, Sparrows Point, at a rendezvous on the southern tip of Great Abaco Island in the Bahamas.

"All the other officers are dead," said R. Helmus, chief engineer of the ill-fated motorship, Doros, who was the only white man in the group. The other seven were natives of Dutch Guiana.

Steward Edward Amzand said a "terrific explosion amidships" occurred about 11 a. m. Monday. Cause of the explosion is unknown, he said.

"The ship suddenly was in flames. In seconds the whole ship was afire. I ran to a lifeboat and helped put it in the water.

"There were 24 men altogether, but I don't know what happened to all the rest of them. Lots of them jumped in the water and we picked up a couple in our lifeboat."

A ship passed the eight survivors in their crowded lifeboat about dusk yesterday, but they were unable to attract its attention.

The American tanker picked up the lifeboat last night. At that time the chief engineer said another lifeboat containing six men was sailing in a northwesterly direction.

The smoldering hulk of the vessel was sighted early today by a Coast Guard search plane. It radioed tersely: "No survivors sighted."

Coast Guard officers said the search would be continued for the others as "long as there is hope."

Man Is Acquitted After 10 Minutes In Stabbing Death

Anthony Coghill, 47, of 1401 8th st nw., yesterday was acquitted of second-degree murder stemming from the fatal stabbing of another man in a fight last May.

Coghill had pleaded self-defense alleging that his opponent, Wilson King, 42, also of the 5th st. nw. address had hurled a milk crate at him at the onset of the fight which involved a woman.

The District Court jury was out only 10 minutes before reporting its findings to Federal Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

82 Slain in Attack On Rally in Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, Dec. 14 (AP).—An official communique said today 82 persons were killed in an attack by "bandits" on a Conservative meeting in the town of Cocuy, in Boyaca department. Thirty ringleaders were reported arrested.

Colombia has been under a state of siege since the middle of November. On November 27 a presidential election, boycotted by the Liberal Party, resulted in the election of Laureano Gomez, Conservative, the only candidate in the field.

Crackdown On Trusts To Continue

By Robert S. Allen

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath will continue to pursue an aggressive "crackdown" policy on antitrust law enforcement—Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer notwithstanding.

Recently, Sawyer announced White House approval for a so-called "positive," as against a "crackdown," attitude in dealing with monopoly and restraint of trade. As part of this plan, he also set up an interagency committee to formulate possible legislation on the matter.

These pronouncements and moves will have no effect on the Justice Department. It will continue to take legal action against antitrust violators.

McGrath takes the position that there is no substitute for litigation in enforcing the law. He said:

"Any program which attempts to educate big business on whether they are violating the antitrust laws is a lot of baloney. When it comes to price fixing or restraint of trade, businessmen and their attorneys know full well when they are or are not violating the law. The only thing they don't know is just how far they can go without being caught.

"I do not envision the Government undertaking a general advisory program on what specific activities may or may not be permissible under the antitrust laws. As far as the policy of the Department of Justice is concerned, it is simply this: There can be no substitute for vigorous enforcement of the antitrust laws."

McGrath also stated that when he was named Attorney General, he received only one injunction from President Truman:

He told me: "Howard, I believe that vigorous enforcement of the antitrust laws is essential for a healthy economy. That is the policy I want you to follow." That is the policy I am following, and will continue to follow.

As evidence of this, it can be revealed the Justice Department will file three new important antitrust suits this month.

Protestant Church Merger Plans Offered

Greenwich, Conn., Dec. 4 (U.P.).—Some 30 representatives of 20 million churchgoers opened a three-day conference today aimed at unifying American Protestant churches.

Dr. H. Paul Douglas, Congregationalist, presented two plans for merger. One called for a union similar to the organization of the Federal Government, with one central figure and each denomination retaining its identity. A second plan, favored by Douglas, would establish an organic union of all Protestant churches with denominations losing their identity.

Denominations being represented are the Methodist Church, Disciples of Christ, Evangelical and Reformed churches, Presbyterian Church in the United States, Congregational Christian churches, Moravian Church in America, Northern Province, and African Methodist Episcopal Zion.

The conference was called to discuss the proposed establishment of a United Protestant Church to give aid to financially anemic churches and make a stronger attack on social problems.

One on the Aisle—

A Superior Film In a 'Filler' Spot

By Richard L. Coe

KEITH'S "They Live by Night" illustrates the hapless confusion that comes over the movie moguls when they've made a good, unusual picture. They don't know what to do with it.

Filmed two years ago and kept off the American screen for some obtuse, business-like reason, it made both a critical and popular success in England as "The Twisted Road."

Though the ads would lead you to believe it's the usual sensational nonsense, it's a reflective study of the effect of poverty on two young people. It's probably not the sort of thing that would delight admirers of "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," for which reason the producers are probably wary of it: no mass appeal.

The logical thing to have done with this would have been to play it in one of the sure-seaters, such as the Playhouse, Dupont, Little, Trans-Lux houses, which seem to be aiming at the fewer, more selective filmgoers. The realistic approach of the better foreign pictures is the core of this slight story, and admirers of such films would have known what they were getting.

Instead, "They Live by Night" arrives at Keith's during the very week of the year when theater attendance is always at its lowest ebb. The result will be that "such pictures aren't money-makers," that nobody wants 'em and that, by countless definitions, "They Live by Night" must be a punk picture.

"THEY LIVE BY NIGHT." RKO-Radio release produced by John Houseman (1948). Screen play by Nicholas Ray from the novel "Thieves Like Us," by Edward Anderson. Photographed by George E. Diskant. Music by Leigh Harline. Directed by Nicholas Ray. At RKO-Keith's.

Keechie	Cathy O'Donnell
Chickamaw	Howard da Silva
T-Dub	Jay C. Flippen

Young Farmer	William Phipps

You see a young man escape from prison with two older, hardened men. The youth is convinced he was railroaded at 16, for an accidental killing. He meets a young girl as ignorant as he, but a child who longs for a life that's quiet, normal and respectable. Trying to break away from the older men, the boy (23) gets into the mire all the deeper and winds up, after some idyllic weeks with the girl he's made his wife, dead with police bullets senselessly peppered into him.

Ignorance and Poverty the Villains

The story is slowly, carefully told and at times too sentimentally. But on the whole the approach is realistic in setting, dialogue and action. While the pace might have been swifter, it remains engrossing to the end.

The reason it's engrossing, of course, is that "They Live By Night" is as much a social document as it is a melodramatic movie.

Here you have the ignorance that from time immemorial has bred crime. The plight of these people has sprung from poverty and ignorance; they have been trapped by the same poverty that is the villain of Shaw's "Major Barbara," now so triumphantly revived at the Dupont. As individuals, they speak with that paucity of expression that is the unconscious load of the ignorant, and their desires for a car and "nice things" reveal how miserably society has ignored the less fortunate.

First-Rate Acting

The acting is absolutely first-rate, with Farley Granger making the young man as a truly tragic figure; neither ugly nor handsome, he brings to the part a muted appeal. Cathy O'Donnell, on occasion a trifle too glamorized, is generally fine, grubby, speechless and inawrdly ecstatic at the end of her loneliness.

Howard da Silva makes a cruel figure of the one-eyed killer numbed to ordinary life, and Jay C. Flippen is fine as his hard-bitten pal. Helen Craig, who created that "Johnny Belinda" girl on the stage, is the woman who turns in the young lovers as the price for her husband's pardon.

A pleasant picture? No. "They Live By Night" is not that, but a comparatively honest study of human beings existing in the substratum of society, a mighty expensive substratum for society to guard against and support.

VAUGHN MONROE, who has few worlds left to conquer, is in town with his band, boys and maidens, playing a one-night stand tonight in Constitution Hall . . . The big, friendly guy has just compelted his first movie, a musical Western, but he'll be without that beard tonight . . . The Super Music Stores are handling the event and you can get seats at their three emporia, 1350 F, 1110 7th nw., and 1327 H st. ne.

"THE YELLOW JACKET" opens its three-night run tonight in Lisner Auditorium, first of the year's offerings by the George Washington University Players . . . The cast includes Charles Vorbach, John Green, Donald Dilley, Dorothy Ohliger, Dionne Dalton, Pericles King, Barbara Shapiro, Nadine Drake, Ruth Mills, Leo Condolon and James Eilets.

TRAVELERS: Newsreel's Tony Muto in Paris, where "December is not quite Paris in May, but will do" . . . Opera's (by virtue of the town's only opera of the year Monday night in Consty Hall) Patrick Hayes and his Evelyn Swarthout at last night's performance of "South Pacific," which we print to prove that no matter whom you know, it takes eight months to get seats.

NOT WANTED—Farley Granger and Cathy O'Donnell in "They Live by Night," the absorbing new film at Keith's about two young people caught on the criminal fringes of society

Aureomycin Treatment Works In Four Cases of 'Shingles'

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Dramatic success with the "golden" drug, aureomycin, in treating "shingles" has been reported by two Newport News (Va.) doctors.

The report, based solely on results with four patients, is considered significant since there has been no specific cure for the highly painful and irritating ailment.

"Shingles," known medically as herpes zoster, shows up as a weepy rash which follows the skin course over a sub-surface nerve. Believed a virus infection, it is often followed by excruciating neuralgic pains when the irritating rash disappears.

Drs. Monte Binder and Landon E. Stubbs of Newport News told of their success in current issues of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Three of the four patients, ranging from 11 to 46 years of age, experienced complete and lasting pain relief within the first 24 hours; their rashes disappeared within five days, and none had the post-rash neuralgic pains, they reported. In the fourth, apparently a more stubborn case, some pain still persisted on the fourth day, and the rash did not subside until the seventh day.

Drs. Binder and Stubbs said they decided to try out the new drug after learning how a patient who was given the drug for another affliction was relieved of "shingles."

The Virginia physicians said they submitted their report to the medical profession on only four cases in the hope that it might spur further investigation by other physicians "in the treatment of a disorder which, in the past, has been so refractory in resisting all forms of therapy."

"Shingles" attacks young and old, but is considered more serious in the aged. Its rash runs an average course of two to four weeks, and post-rash neuralgia may persist for months. Although never fatal in itself, it carries a danger of morphine addiction to those patients who use the habit-forming drug to ease the pains.

U. S. Divorce Upheld in Scotland; New Stand Seen

Edinburg, Scotland, Dec. 14 (AP). A Scottish judge recognized the legality of an American divorce today. His decision raised the possibility Britain may do an about-face in regard to such decrees.

Lord Sorn dismissed a divorce plea by Mrs. Rachael Noble Darling of Glasgow against her former American soldier husband, Eddie Allen Perin of Priest River, Idaho, holding Perin's earlier United States decree was effective.

Previously American divorces have not been recognized in Britain, although American marriages are valid here.

Mrs. Darling alleged the American decree was obtained by fraud. Her petition charged Perin, who has remarried, with adultery.

Lord Sorn commented that the trend of modern decisions is to recognize the authority of the court where the divorce is obtained.

Wheaton Chamber Asks Zone Change

The Wheaton Chamber of Commerce last night asked a change in zoning to permit construction of semidetached homes at the intersection of the west side of Georgia and Blue Ridge aves., Wheaton Hills.

The chamber, in a resolution address to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, urged that the area at the intersection be designated Residential B, instead of A. The change would permit the Simon Construction Co. to build about 25 semidetached houses there.

The Christmas candlelight dedication ceremony, involving a giant candle and some 68 other candles along Georgia, will be held December 23, it was announced at the meeting in Glenmont School.

Philip Hauser, acting director, Census Bureau, has advised the chamber that while no separate census of the Wheaton trade area would be printed, the results would be made available to the organization. The area is bounded by Kensington on the west, Forest Glen rd. on the south, Sligo Creek and Camp Mill rd. on the east, Aspen Hill rd. to the north, and Viers Mill on the northwest.

Business Group Opposes D. C. Civil Rights Probe

The Federation of Businessmen's Associations last night went on record as opposed to the proposal by Senator Neely (D., W. Va.) that a commission be appointed to investigate civil rights in the District.

The organization said the proposal, now pending in Congress, provides for appointment of the commission at the District's cost, and that this would be a needless expense to taxpayers.

The organization, meeting in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co., congratulated the Community Chest on its progress to date.

N. Washington Council Wants Sesqui Theater

The North Washington Council of Citizens Associations went on record last night approving erection of the Sesquicentennial Amphitheater in its area, and offered its complete coperation to the commission.

Meeting at No. 6 Precinct Station House in the 1300 block of Nicholson st., the group voted approval of the motion presented by Capt. Harry Dengler, chairman of the council's Sesqui committee.

Rhode Island Group Names 2 Committees

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, meeting in Batemans Store, 2004 Rhode Island ave. ne., last night named a five-man nominating committee and a three-man auditing committee.

The nominating committee, to report at the January 11 meeting, includes Fred W. Nerlich, chairman; Richard F. Rassier, J. A. Duerksen, Joseph L. Bateman and Harold J. Clay.

The auditing committee includes Mrs. Edith F. Gouge, chairman; A. D. Sartwell and Chester F. Letch.

Ballads to Feature Hobby Show Today

L. Parker Temple, a Census Bureau official whose hobby is interpreting folk songs, will present a selection of American ballads at the two-day hobby show today and Friday in Pierce Hall, 15th and Harvard sts. nw., starting at 7 p. m.

Officials of the Laymen's League of All Souls' Unitarian Church, are sponsoring the show.

Rockville Man Hurt In Auto Accident

Wilbur W. Shipe, 41, of Rockville, received head and face lacerations yesterday when struck by an automobile at Washington and Montgomery aves., Rockville.

Shipe was taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda by the Rockville Fire Department Rescue Squad and was admitted for observation and treatment for shock. Police did not charge the driver, identified as Alvin R. Windsor, 36, of Seven Locks rd., near Rockville.

McNayr Urges Takoma Park To Think Ahead on Parking

Irving G. McNayr, Montgomery County manager, last night warned Takoma Park residents to use foresight, the lack of which has made Washington and Bethesda "shoppers' nightmares," and to make immediate plans for off-street parking.

Speaking at a meeting of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce at Nelson's Restaurant, he called on residents to look ahead 10 or 15 years to the commercial possibilities of their city.

He mentioned Washington and Bethesda as two areas which "had missed the boat" in planning for parking lots. Silver Spring he cited for its vision, because "it did figure off-street parking into its master plan."

"Bethesda business men now are crying for the opportunity they muffed five years ago when they turned down an off-street parking bond issue," he said, "while property values in the Silver Spring commercial area have been increased 10 and 15 fold because of its foresight.

"Washington business men today are sadly watching the continual trek of former shoppers to the suburban business centers, caused by the difficulty of downtown parking."

The county manager pointed out it was fine to have a residential community, but it could not carry the tax load without establishment of new sources of revenue.

"It is important for the people of Takoma Park to get behind off-street parking as a means of bringing more business and more money to the community," he said.

Citing figures compiled by Alex Hancock, Montgomery County Director of Finances, McNayr said facilities for 500 cars would cost approximately $250,000. He didn't recommend such construction on the city's present assessed commercial valuation of $1,291,490.

He favored a $150,000 project, which, he said, would probably boost the tax rate about 10 cents on each $100.

Department Heads To Get Right to Run Agencies Under Plan

All legal authority for operating Federal agencies would be transferred to department heads in a reorganization plan being drafted for the President.

The objective of the proposal is to make department heads clearly responsible for the actions of the agencies under them. Many agencies now operate under specific legal authority which permits them to be more or less independent of the department heads. Department and agency heads have clashed frequently over police matters.

Cabinet members would have the power to delegate a part of their authority back to the agency heads under the plan as written. The President presumably will send the plan to Congress early next month. The Hoover Commission group will give its enthusiastic support to the proposal. The proposal, however, won't be popular with the agency heads.

YULE SPIRIT: Albert Bethel is a young $2700 clerk at the National Labor Relations Board. The baby he and his wife, Althea, were expecting the other day turned out to be—triplets, quite a family for a low-paid clerk.

Albert's NLRB colleagues are helping him. More than $180 in cash was turned over to him yesterday by Chairman Paul Herzog and General Counsel Denham. In addition, a Christmas basket of diapers and clothes for the triplets—Darnell, Dale, anad Daryl—is being collected by a committee headed by Sarah Lowry.

POINT FOUR: Leslie Wheeler is reported to be in line for a top job to carry out the President's Point Four program to aid undeveloped regions. The State Department will administer the program.

Wheeler is a former director of Agriculture's Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations. He joined State's Foreign Service a year ago and he has been stationed since in Mexico.

AIR FORCE: Brackley Shaw is resigning as general counsel of the Air Force to practice law here. He will join the law firm of Welch Pogue, the former chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

NBS: Unless there is a last-minute switch, the Bureau of Standards' new radio propagation laboratory will be built in Boulder, Colo. Half a dozen cities are campaigning actively for the five-million-dollar project. Federal officials decided to construct the building in an inland city for security reasons.

INTERIOR: Vernon D. Northrup will head up its new office of administrative management and report directly to Secretary Oscar L. Chapman. He will be in charge of the department's budget, personnel, and other housekeeping functions. The Secretary can be expected to ask Congress to set up the office under an Assistant Secretary.

CHANGEOVER: Fifteen Federal agencies have requested the Civil Service Commission to bring 8305 of their employes under the new Classification Act. Twelve agencies informed the commission that they have no additional employes to be covered by the act.

The agencies and the number of employes in each to have their salaries fixed by the new law follows:

Federal Housing Administration, 5222; Agriculture, 101; Justice, 1128; Treasury, 503; Displaced Persons Commission, 261; Export-Import Bank, 118; Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, 226; Federal Power Commission, 25; General Accounting, 10; Maritime, 39; Philippine War Damage, 114; Securities and Exchange, 6; Tariff, 1; Soldiers' Home, 545, and the White House, 6.

Postoffice, Veterans, State, National Mediation, NLRB, ICC, Indian Claims, Housing Expediter, Federal Trade, Economic Cooperation, Civil Aeronautics Board, and the District Unemployment Compensation Board all reported they have no additional employes to be brought in under the act.

Eventually upwards of 25,000 employes will be involved in the changeover. The law requires the salaries of these jobs to be fixed under the classification system by next April 28.

New Charter Plan Poses Problems in Falls Church

Elected School Board, Added Powers for City Manager Among Major Points Studied

By Judith F. Spivak
Post Reporter

Nonpartisan local elections, an elected school board and greatly increased powers for the city manager are among provisions now under study for a proposed new Falls Church charter, Charter Commission Chairman Franklin Thackrey said yesterday.

Commission sentiment generally favors both an elected school board and nonpartisan local elections, according to Thackrey, who emphasized no "poll" had been taken.

Most controversial charter proposal, he said, is the question of the city manager's authority.

Subordinate to Council

"As it is now the manager (Roy F. Dunn) is more or less an assistant, subordinate to the city council," Thackrey pointed out. "Under the proposed draft he would become a chief executive with administrative powers comparable to what the council has now."

Also the cause of considerable commission discussion, Thackrey said, are such questions as when school board elections should take place, and whether persons who have children in city schools, but are not registered Falls Church voters, should be permitted to cast a ballot in the school board elections.

The nine-man charter commission is meeting almost nightly to study a charter draft prepared by the University of Virginia's bureau of public administration, under direction of Dr. Rowland A. Egger.

No Formal Action Yet

The charter commission, which has taken no formal action yet on any draft provisions, expects to approve a final version by Christmas, Thackrey said.

It will then be submitted to the city council for approval after a public hearing. Last step will be presentation of the new charter to the State Legislature, which may approve, amend, or turn it down.

Other provisions in the Virginia University draft, none of which have yet been acted on by the commission, according to Thackrey, include:

1. Election of city council members from the city at large, instead of by wards, as at present.

2. Reduction of the council from its present nine members, plus an elected mayor, to seven members, who would choose a 'mayor' themselves from their own ranks.

Authority to Issue Bonds

3. Authority for the city council to issue bonds without any referendum (as required now), up to the city's constitutional debt limit of 18 percent of assessed property valuation. Ten percent of city voters could still petition for a referendum, however.

4. Widened jurisdiction of the present Falls Church Police Justice Court which handles only criminal misdemeanors, violations of city ordinances, and tax violations. The proposed Civil and Police Justice Court would also deal with civil cases involving up to $1000.

5. Specific authority for the city council to levy amusement taxes, vehicle taxes and public utility taxes, if it wants to. (Actually the city already possesses such powers under the general law, City Attorney LaRue Van Meter explained.)

Members of Group

Members of the Charter Commission are: Chairman, Franklin Thackrey; executive secretary, LaRue Van Meter; Arthur B. McLean; Lee M. Rhoads (city councilman); Edward Knouse (city planning commission chairman); Mrs. Fredena Hyde, Carl H. Hink, Judson B. Wheeler, Carl W. Nelson.

In addition, five nonvoting "associate" members, representing the proposed annexation zone in Fairfax, are sitting in on discussions: David O. Walter, James R. Nielson, O. Kenneth Byerly, George W. Morris and John J. Crowley.

Jews to Begin Their Festival Of Light Today

Chanukkoh, the Jewish "festival of lights," will begin at sundown today when the first of eight candles will be lighted in homes and synagogues.

On each night during the eight-day festival an additional candle will be lighted until eight candles blaze in the menorah or candelabrum.

Chanukkoh, which dates from the defeat of the forces of Antiochus Epiphanes by the Jews in 165 B.C., celebrates achievment of religious liberty by the ancient Jews. During the holiday, gifts are presented to children and to the poor.

Members of Louis D. Brandeis Zionist District, Zionist Organization of America, will light the first of the Chanukkoh candles at a party at 8 p. m. today at Indian Spring Country Club, Silver Spring, Md.

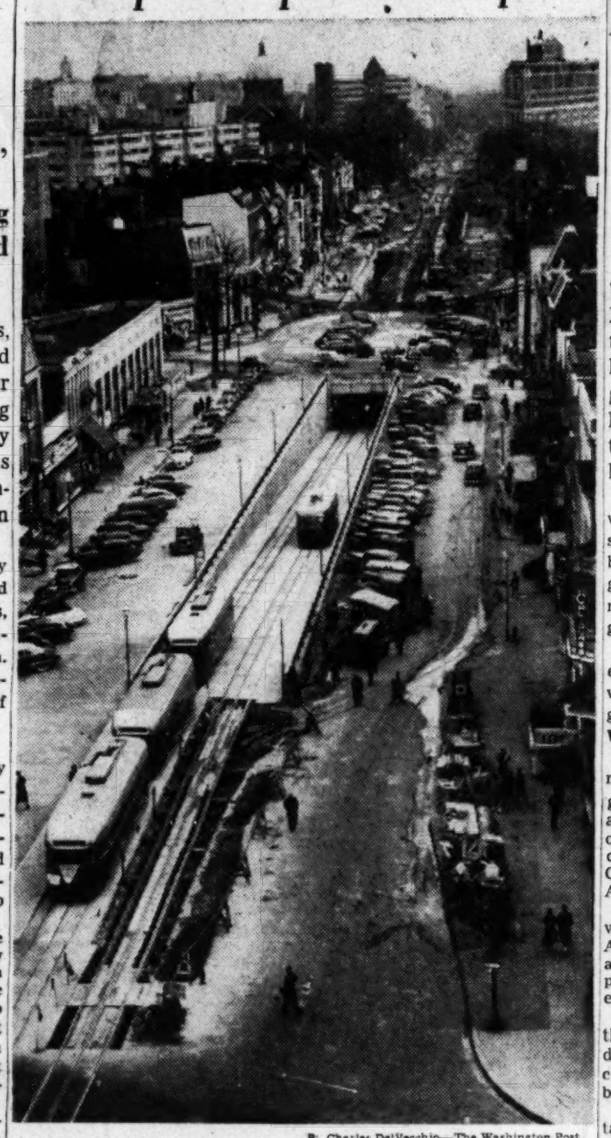
Grant Declared 'A Little Late' In Slap at Dupont Underpass



B. Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

FOUR STREETCARS WITH TWO DESIRES—They want to get through the Dupont Circle underpass both ways—north-south

District highway officials are unimpressed with Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant's skepticism over the location of the Dupont Circle underpass.

To Grant's suggestion that it might better have been constructed in line with Massachusetts ave., instead of Connecticut, Engineer of Streets S. R. Harrison yesterday replied:

"It's a little late to talk about that now. That question was all thrashed out in the planning stage, and everyone finally agreed on Connecticut ave. All we can do now is wait ten years and see if we were right." The underpass is scheduled for completion in three months after more than two years' work.

Grant raised the question in a speech Tuesday on the grounds that Connecticut ave. has been developed almost to saturation point, while much of Massachusetts ave. is still undeveloped.

Harrison pointed out that building in nearby Maryland will continue to increase Connecticut ave. traffic, while planned highway projects should give relief to Massachusetts ave. west of the circle.

Among these projects, Harrison said, are the Arizona freeway and widening of Foxhall rd., both of which are expected to divert incoming Massachusetts ave. traffic south to the Whitehurst Freeway.

Decision to build the Dupont Circle underpass for Connecticut ave. traffic was approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission while Grant was its chairman, he noted.

The underpass went into full use by trolley cars when the first southbound streetcar passed through it yesterday at 5:46 a. m. The first northbound trolley went through the underpass November 2.

New Charter Is Appraised In Alexandria

Councilman Hits Employe Provision; Utility Tax Scored

Criticism of Alexandria's proposed charter, made public Tuesday after six months' preparation, was offered yesterday in several quarters.

Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim took issue with a provision in the charter which would oust members of the council who interfere in the hiring and firing of city employes.

He also siad he would ask for a referendum on the proposal of the charter to make the city attorney an appointive instead of an elective office, and also a charter provision which would eliminate the office of city collector.

Utility Tax Assailed

The Alexandria League of Women Voters praised the charter revision commission for "a most thorough and explicit job." But the league branded "regressive" a 10 percent tax on public utility bills called for in the 1950 budget. The charter provides that the city council may set up such a tax.

The league asserted it was "unfortunate" that two "essentially separate items"—the budget and charter revision—have been tied into the same discussion through the proposed 10 percent utility tax.

Mrs. W. F. Pfeiffer, league president, said all basic tax scources must be explored and utilized before taking on the 10 percent utility tax.

Hearing Next Month

Alexandria Mayor Franklin P. Backus said a public hearing on the proposed charter would be held sometime next month.

"We certainly plan to get the charter this session of the Legislature," he said. The Virginia General Assembly convenes January 11.

Backus said Virginia State Senator Andrew W. Clarke and Delegate Armistead L. Boothe probably will introduce the charter into the General Assembly if they approve it and the City Council requests them to.

Councilman Albert A. Smoot said he hadn't had time to study the proposed charter but commented that the provision which would keep councilmen from interfering in the firing and hiring of city workers was a good one.

Study Incomplete

The reaction at Alexandria City Hall was limited because most persons had not yet had time to study the proposed charter.

One official, however, asserted the mayor should be elected on a separate ballot instead of by the council as proposed. The candidate for council receiving the largest number of votes automatically becomes mayor under the current system.

Barrett, Fay Huddle Over Bribe Talk

Confer for Hour About Inquiry Into Charges Made at Trial of Acalotti

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, and George Morris Fay, United States attorney, protagonists in a year-long feud about Washington gambling, conferred for an hour yesterday about charges that an indicted gambler regularly paid off policemen.

The charges were aired last week in the trial of Attilio Acalotti, self-styled Mayor of Thomas Circle, by Bernice Franklin, his former girl friend, and Fay's star witness before the special gambling grand jury.

Acalotti was convicted of threatening Miss Franklin while she was testifying before the gambling grand jury.

Woman's Testimony

The pretty red-haired ex-waitress testified that "Detective Sergeant Burns, Private Morrison, and Sergeant Fredette, were paid off by Acalotti once a month. She described "Detective John McCarthy and Private Winters" as Acalotti's "associates."

With Fay and Barrett yesterday were closeted John W. Fihelly, Assistant United States Attorney, and Inspector George Wallrodt, police supervisor, who attended each session of the Acalotti trial.

After the meeting Fihelly said that Inspector Wallrodt was conducting an investigation of the charges for Major Barrett, and had been since the charges were made.

Fihelly said that Major Barrett talked with Fay at this stage of the investigation "to inform him that the probe was being made, and to make certain that the investigation would not interfere with the three gambling trials Acalotti faces, or any trials in which Bernice Franklin will appear as a witness."

Offer of Cooperation

"Fay offered to cooperate with Major Barrett in any way he could," Fihelly said. "He offered to furnish any records asked for or any other information in the possession of this office."

During the Acalotti trial Detective Sergt. Charles Burns, Sergt. Arthur E. Fredette and Pvt. Kenneth A. Winters took the stand as defense witnesses, and denied receiving any payoffs from the convicted gambler.

Acalotti's lawyer, Charles E. Ford, said there was no Private Morrison listed on police records.

Gas Rate Rise Stands, PUC Tells Group

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday denied a request from the Federation of Citizens Association that it throw out the recently granted gas rate increases.

In a brief order, the PUC stated its decision last month granting the Washington Gas Light Co. an average 6.14 percent boost in rates had been reached "after careful consideration of the evidence," and that it believed its conclusions were "proper."

The federation had asserted the PUC made six errors in reaching its decision, including giving the new rates a retroactive effect. It also charged the new rates discriminate against certain classes of consumers and will permit the company to earn an excessive rate of return.

James Boys Jailed for 3 to 9 Years

Two James boys were given stiff sentences for housebreaking and grand larceny yesterday, while a third brother was being held for the grand jury on a similar charge.

In District Court, Stance, 29, and Oliver, 24, were sentenced to serve from three to nine years each for stealing a safe and $60,000 worth of assets in it last January.

Before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, Samuel James, 27, was held in $5000 bond for the grand jury, charged with entering a 7th st. liquor store and removing 64 cases of whisky valued at $2500.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut sentenced Stance of 1332 9th st. nw., and Oliver of 1600 A st. se. They were convicted last May of robbing Richard H. Beckley, 69, retired detective sergeant and poolroom operator, 1800 New Jersey ave. nw.

Lawrence held Samuel James, 512 58th st. ne., for the grand jury, after a preliminary hearing in which an FBI laboratory analyst and the liquor-store owner testified.

Albert Fingerhut testified a large hole was cut through a rear brick wall of his liquor store at 1542 7th st. nw., sometime after closing November 27. He said the safe was damaged, but not entered, that $17 in cash was removed from the register, and 64 cases of whisky disappeared.

FBI Agent Richard W. Flack testified "debris" taken from the clothes of Samuel James November 28 matched samples of brick, mortar, dirt, paint and wallboard taken from the liquor store wall. He said "this debris could have come from the same sources, and the chances of it having come from another wall are remote."

James, dressed in a new brown pin-stripe suit and grey suede shoes, jumped to his feet throughout the hearing to deny all charges.

DC-3 Raised From River For Study

CAB to Examine Plane in Which 4 Persons Died

By Robert Jordan
Post Reporter

The Navy, Air Force and Army Engineers yesterday lifted from the Potomac River the battered Capital Air Lines DC-3 in which four persons were killed Monday night.

Wreckage of the plane, from which 19 persons were saved in a spectacular rescue, was to be towed to the Naval Gun Factory at 4 a. m. today, high tide.

The wreckage will be held for study by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Lieut. Comdr. T. R. Rowe, who directed the salvage job, said the plane was broken into five parts. Each half of the wing was severed from the fuselage, and each engine was broken off the wing. One side of the landing gear was torn loose.

Fifty Men Raise Plane

A crew of 50 men in small boats, barges and a crane had the plane out of the five feet of water by 4:45 p. m. Commander Rowe said the job was done with a minimum of further damage, "thanks to fine cooperation between the Army, Air Force and Navy."

The CAB is expected to begin public hearings on the disaster within 10 days. Most of its top investigators are now in Dallas, Tex., conducting hearings on a crash November 29, in which 28 persons perished.

Only One In Danger

Only one of the 19 survivors of Monday's accident remained on the critical list. He is George C. Harrison, 47, of 5921 N. 16th st., Arlington, in Bolling Air Force Base Hospital.

The stand-by crash ward at Bolling Air Force Base, where all 19 injured persons received emergency treatment, used 250,000 cc. of plasma and 25,000 cc.—25 quarts—of whole blood during the first 24 hours after the crash.

A staff of 150 airmen and Wafs worked with 11 doctors without a letup, until all but one patient seemed to be out of danger.

The CAB said the accident record rate for commercial aviation is still the best in history this year, despite two air crashes within six weeks.

District Puts All-Night Parking Ban Into Effect

The all-night winter parking ban on heavily traveled District streets went into effect at 2 a. m. today.

George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, said he had recommended the 2 a. m. to 7 a. m. ban with "greatest reluctance." His department has found no other effective means to clear streets of snow after a night storm, he said.

The little yellow signs tell what streets come under the ban. They'll stay up until March 15.

U. S. Says 6% Phone Rate Boost Is Enough

District's Growth And Stability of Customers Cited By Census Chief

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Washington's rosy population picture was cited yesterday to buttress a Federal Government position that local telephone rates should be increased only an average of 6 percent.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. has asked for a 13 percent boost, and on Tuesday a District Public Utilities Commission expert recommended an 8.75 rise. The hearing is being held by PUC in the District Building.

The Federal Supply Service, representing the Federal Government, largest single buyer of phone service, called on Dr. Philip M Hauser, acting director of the Census Bureau, to help convince the PUC that Washington is a wonderful place to run a phone company—more potential customers are arriving all the time.

Hauser said the District's population has risen steadily, and in 1940 was 138 percent above 1900. In this period the number of households—each a potential telephone subscriber—has risen 214 percent. The difference is accounted for by the accompanying reduction in the size of families, he explained.

The outlook for future growth is bright. "There is no basis whatever for anticipation of a decline" and in fact, when the rest of the country is in trouble, as in war or depression, Washington has experienced its greatest growth."

In the decade, 1860 to 1870, the Civil War period, the population rose 78.7 percent over the previous 10 years. From 1910 to 1920 it went up 32.2 percent and 30.1 in the 1940-48 period, which included both World Wars. The 1930-40 decade, which included the depression, ended in a 36.2 percent population rise.

Dr. Hauser attributed these rises to increases in Federal Government during such periods of stress.

He threw out one caution, however. He said the District of Columbia saturation point is estimated at 1,125,000 and the 1948 estimated population was 863,000, leaving room for a "maximum possible expansion" of 262,000.

The situation would contribute to the continued accelerated growth of nearby Maryland and Virginia areas as the "dormitory" for Washington's workers.

Another Government witness, David A. Kosh, chief of the Public Utilities Division in Federal Supply, presented a long series of exhibits to substantiate his estimate that C. & P. should be allowed a 5.25 percent rate of return. This, he estimated, would result in $1,600,000 more revenue and require a 6 percent boost in rates.

Kosh challenged the company's position that a 7 percent return was required to help maintain the level of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. dividends. The A. T. & T. owns C & P. completely and provides necessary capital by issuing A. T. & T. securities.

The Federal economist said that if C. & P. issued stocks and bonds, its favorable position because of its location here would enable it to obtain purchasers at lower interest and dividend payments than A. T. & T. now pays. This borrowing advantage should be accorded local telephone subscribers or else the Washington patrons are being penalized by C. & P.'s financial structure, Kosh said.

He said, too, that if the company were on its own, financially, it could issue a large ratio of bonds bearing low interest rather than be expected to meet the higher cost of A. T. & T.'s $9 stock dividend. In fact, C. & P. could issue more bonds safely up to the point where interest represented 30 percent of the earnings, Kosh said.

He criticized the A. T. & T.'s intention of obtaining a one-third debt ratio as conservative and costly in that it limited the amount of bonds which were issued.

Wife of U.S. Official Found Dead in Bed

Mrs. Alice Lalor Hulick, 42, wife of a State Department executive, was found dead in a bedroom of her home early yesterday.

Detectives said a penciled note, addressed to "Mother," was found on a bureau near the bed. Police found on empty bottle of sleeping tablets in the house.

Her husband, Charles V. Hulick, told police his wife was despondent about her health and had been treated for a nervous ailment.

Found by Husband

Hulick, until two years ago was executive assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State for Occupied Areas.

He said he is still in Government, but declined to reveal his position. Listings indicate he is an official of the top-secret Central Inteligence Agency (CIA).

Detective Pvt. Peter Zazanis said Hulick found his wife about 6:55 a. m. and called a physician to the home, 2821 29th st. nw. The physician pronounced the woman dead at 7:20 a. m.

Chemical Analysis Awaited

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald withheld a certification of death pending a chemical analysis.

The note, as released by Zazanis, reads:

"This is the best way. Do give my love to the children."

Hulick refused to identify Mrs. Hulick's mother, but said she does not live in Washington.

The couple has two sons, Charles V., jr., 9, and Dereck, 13.

Szell Leads Magnificent Performance

By Paul Hume

The members of the National Symphony Orchestra played a magnificent concert last night for George Szell, their guest conductor.

Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Symphony, chose the most standard of programs: Weber's Oberon Overture, Smetana's Moldau, Till Eulenspigel of Richard Strauss, and the first symphony of Brahms.

It is all beautiful music, and the orchestra rose with its guest leader to some of the finest playing in its history. With Szell's conducting of the familiar music it was quite apparent that he found Howard Mitchell's recent groundwork excellent. As he said the other day, "it is quite apparent that the orchestra is in capable hands."

All evening the men and women of the National Symphony showed the noted leader what they could do. The oboe solos in the symphony never, from any orchestra, sounded more inspired than as Lifschey played them. Jan Tomasow gave sensitive, lovely playing in both Strauss and Brahms. He made the closing of the second movement unusually glowing.

The tone of the orchestra shone throughout all they did. In the Strauss, virtuoso passages for various choirs and full ensemble came through with brilliant precision. Szell is a great technician with an orchestra. His results were completely enjoyable.

We would prefer the Brahms Finale without the retard in the chorale, but few conductors eschew it. The tempo of the allegretto was a fresh delight. Smetana's Vltava, as it should be called in respect to its Czech author, rose and fell in unendingly perfect flow.

Had the French horns avoided their occasional slips in the symphony the technical side of the evening would get a high mark. We shall remember Szell with warm regard.

Next week Mitchell returns with Rose Bampton in scenes from Fidelio and Wozzeck, and Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition.

Pastor and Wife Celebrate Their Golden Wedding

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. James D. Pair celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary yesterday with a family party at their home, 745 Girard st. nw.

Mr. Pair, 76, was a Postoffice Department clerk for 40 years until his retirement in 1942. A graduate of the Howard University School of Religion, he is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Brentwood, Md.

He is also president emeritus of the Federation of P-TA's of the District and budget director of the National Congress of Colored Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Pair is a graduate of Heartshorn College, Richmond, Va., and a former school teacher.

James T. Nicholson Starts 31st Year With Red Cross

Members of the national headquarters staff of the Red Cross, from General George C. Marshall, president, down to the youngest messenger boy, paid a surprise tribute to Nicholson, Monday, on the completion of his thirtieth anniversary.

Nicholson, who is the continuing executive head of the Red Cross, was presented with a gold pocket watch and a bound volume of congratulatory letters from Red Cross workers all over the world, and General Marshall pinned a 30-year sevice bar on his lapel.

Sen. Sparkman Tells Of Hope for Housing

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) said yesterday he is hopeful that Congress next year will enact workable legislation to provide "middle income" housing.

About 150 persons attended the luncheon in the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Let Teachers Do Jury Duty, Board Asked

Board of Education sanction for District public school teachers to serve on juries was requested yesterday by the Washington branch, American Association of University Women.

In a letter to the board, the association's committee on the legal and economic status of women said that juries "should no longer be deprived of the services of public school teachers whose educational qualifications and mature judgment would be decided assets."

The organization asked the board to announce a policy permitting teachers to perform jury service "without prejudice to their salaries or position." Recent legislation providing sick leave and leave with pay for other valid causes, make conditions favorable for granting teachers leave for jury service, the letter said.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said teachers now are encouraged to ask to be excused from jury service.

"We take the position they should not interrupt one public service for another," he said.

Teachers receive no financial advantage from jury service, it was pointed out. Their salaries as teachers are greater than what they would receive as jurors and under law they cannot receive both. In almost every case teachers have been excused from juries when they requested it, Dr. Corning said.

The committee of the AAUW which drew up the petition is under the chairmanship of Mrs. Robert W. Brooks, a teacher at Cardozo High School.

Champion Vegetable Grower Honored at Meeting Here

Russell L. Sears, jr., a 20-year-old college student from Cummington, Mass., has been named 1949 national champion of the National Junior Vegetable Growers' Association.

Four Maryland youths and a Virginian, winners of State awards, are also among those to be honored at a 6:45 p. m. dinner in the Hotel Washington today, concluding the organization's fifteenth annual convention. Knox T. Hutchinson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, will speak.

The Maryland youths include Roxie Lee Montgomery, 20, of Ijamsville; Daniel Tompkins, 18, of Waldorf; James R. Moxley, jr., 19, West Friendship, and John W. Wysong, Forest Hill. Both Moxley and Miss Montgomery are University of Maryland students.

The Virginia winner is Darrell Large, 16, of Coeburn. Convention officials said the organization is just getting started in Virginia. Three youths from Virginia and 18 from Maryland are among the approximately 500 junior growers from 40 States attending the convention.

Russell Sears as national winner of the ninth annual contest sponsored by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. to encourage better vegetable production and marketing, will receive a $500 agricultural scholarship award.

Sears, who was a $200 regional award winner in 1948, grossed about $1300 from only 45 hours' spare-time work on a two-and-a-half acre potato patch, including both growing and marketing the potatoes.

Business sessions, and preliminaries in "contest" to demonstrate practical phases of production, marked yesterday's program. Finals in the contests, and election of officers will take place today.

Group Plans Battle on Dog Shots

Strong opposition to Montgomery County's proposed compulsory rabies vaccination ordinance was indicated yesterday by the Animal Protective Association.

The ordinance, which prescribes annual vaccination of pets, will be discussed at a hearing conducted by the county council December 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the council hearing room at the Rockville courthouse.

Death of Pets Claimed

Mrs. H. D. Albin, secretary of the association, declared that such shots often result in paralysis or death of the pets. Compulsory innoculations are banned in England, she said, because "they spread rabies."

She asserted that the use of the shots increased the incidence of rabies in Alabama, and quoted an official of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry to the effect that the increase is "coincident with one-shot vaccination."

Urged to Attend Meeting

County citizens were urged by Mrs. Albin to attend the hearing and protest passage of the ordinance. However, Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, minimized the harmful effect of vaccination, saying such occurrences are "extremely rare."

Furthermore, the vaccine cannot cause rabies, he emphasized.

Mrs. Albin, who lives at 20 Syracuse ave., Takoma Park, said the Animal Protective Association is composed of members from the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Mrs. E. R. Combs

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14 (AP). — Mrs. Rassa Candler Combs, 74, wife of E. R. Combs, Clerk of the Virginia Senate and chairman of the State Compensation Board, died last night in a Richmond hospital after an illness of about 10 months.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday at Lebanon.

Surviving, in addition to her husband, are six daughters and two sons, including E. B. Combs, Washington; and four sisters and two brothers.

4 D. C. Teenagers Jailed in W. Va. For Part in Holdup

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 14 (AP). Four Washington, D. C., teen-agers faced prison sentences today after entering pleas of guilty to charges of robbing a filling station operator near here last September 30.

The sentences were imposed by Judge Arlos J. Harbert of the Harrison County Criminal Court. Sentencing of Robert Edward Estep, 18, of 326 6th st. se., has been deferred pending further investigation of his case.

Receiving five-year sentences were two 16-year-old youths and Hazel Louise Yeager, 18, 614 E st. se. Miss Yeager, described by court attaches as an expectant mother, will be sent to the State Prison for Women at Pence Springs.

Given an indefinite sentence to the Girls' Industrial School at Salem was another girl, 15 years old.

The five were indicted by the November grand jury on a charge of robbing Arthur Crislip of Brushy Fork, night attendant at a Bridgeport Hill filling station, of about $50.

Lieut. Mankey Rites Today; Crash Victim

Funeral services will be held in Syracuse, N. Y., today for Lieut. Robert T. Mankey, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mankey, of 4514 Connecticut ave. nw.

Lieutenant Mankey was killed Sunday when his Air National Guard P-47 Thunderbolt plunged into a mountainside 30 miles south of Syracuse.

He was a senior in the College of Fine Arts at Syracuse University. His father is executive director of the Panel of Aircraft Equipment of the Research and Development Board here.

Lieutenant Mankey, holder of a Flying Cross and veteran of 13 missions and 36 months overseas with the Ninth Air Force in World War II, was on a two-man blind-flying mission when the accident occurred.

His plane hit a small mountain obscured by a low-lying cloud. His wing man shouted a warning not to enter the cloud, but it came too late, it was reported later.

After the services, the body will be cremated and the ashes flown to California to be distributed over Santa Monica, Lieutenant Mankey's former home.

Besides his parents, he is survived by his wife, the former Donna L. Jones, and a sister, Vivian, both of Los Angeles, and a brother, Jack, of Washington.

William H. Barnholt

Funeral services for an 85-year-old Washington Senators fan, who had hoped to live to see them win another pennant, will be held at 9:30 a. m. today at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, 12th and Monroe sts. ne.

He is William H. Barnholt, 1409 Lawrence st. ne., GPO printer retired after 36 years, who had spent the past 16 years following the Nats in Florida and here. He took tickets at Griffith Park for 11 years.

Known as "Barney" and "Pop," he died in Libertyville, Ill., Sunday while visiting his daughter.

A member of Potomac Council, 433, Knights of Columbus, he leaves three sons, William S., 3337 Baker st. ne.; George E., 1312 Monroe st. nw., and Harry, of Berkeley, Calif.; three daughters, Margaret, of Washington; Mrs. Irvin Hall, Columbus, Ohio, and Mrs. John L. Druhan, Libertyville, Ill.

Autopsy Clears Son-in-Law in Woman's Death

Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner, reported yesterday that an autopsy on Mrs. Lena Merchant, who died early Tuesday, showed death was caused by a heart condition.

Mrs. Merchant, 49, was pronounced dead at 12:20 a. m., a short time after trying to break up an alercation at her home, 225 Lynhaven dr., between her daughter and son-in-law.

Police said the son-in-law, Donald Rainey, 21, of 211 W. Glebe rd., struck Mrs. Merchant twice.

A manslaughter investigation was dropped by police yesterday after the coroner's announcement that the blows had nothing to do with Mrs. Merchant's death.

In Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, Rainey was fined $50 and given a 30-day suspended jail sentence on assault and battery charges brought by his wife, Dorothy.

Yule Spirit to Rule At Board of Trade Meeting Tonight

The Christmas spirit will rule tonight at the Board of Trade's third general membership meeting in the Presidential ballroom in the Statler Hotel at 8 p. m.

Speakers will be the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of the Foundry Methodist Church, and chaplain of the United States Senate; Charles Fahy, who will be sworn in today as a new judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the District, and Morgan Beatty, NBC news commentator.

Christmas music will be sung by the Foundry Church choir, and there will be community singing of Christmas carols and songs.

D. N. Houston, Lawyer and Banker, Dies

David Neil Houston, 73, retired trust officer at the American Security & Trust Co., 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., died yesterday at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, Md., after a short illness.

Born in Washington in 1876, he was the son of Dr. Samuel Houston, formerly medical referee of the United States Pension Office, now the Veterans Administration.

A graduate of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., and the Columbian Law School (now George Washington University), he engaged in private law practice with the late Alexander H. Bell, becoming associated with the American Security & Trust Co. in 1910. There he occupied the positions of assistant trust officer and trust officer, retiring in January, 1948. He lived at 3613 Newark st. nw.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. George W. Houston, and a son, Capt. Robert N. Houston, USAF, now stationed at Bolling Field.

Funeral services will be held at Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw., Friday at 2 p. m. Burial will follow in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Miss Johnson, Loan League Officer, Dies

Miss E. Louise Johnson, 57, Washington representative of the United States Savings and Loan League and widely known in congressional circles, died unexpectedly yesterday morning on her way to work from cerebral hemorrhage.

After leaving her apartment in the Jefferson Hotel, 1200 16th st. nw., she felt faint, friends said. Walking several blocks, she was overtaken by a fierce headache and nausea, slumping to the curb. An unidentified taxi driver, sensing her plight, picked her up, and took her to the hotel where she died within the hour.

A native of Columbus, Ohio, Miss Johnson graduated in 1914 from Ohio State University, and for the past 20 years has acted as Washington representative of the Savings and Loan League. She had been a District resident for over 30 years.

Miss Johnson was at one time secretary to former Solicitor General James M. Beck, was active in the American Association of University Women and a member of All Souls' (Unitarian) Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw.

Surviving is a brother, Clarence R. Johnson, a real estate dealer of Columbus.

Funeral services will be at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw. at 3:30 p. m. today. Burial will follow Friday at Greenlawn Cemetery, Columbus.

Bertram D. Hulen

The ashes of Bertram D. Hulen, veteran New York Times correspondent, were buried with military honors in Arlington Cemetery yesterday.

Prominent persons attending the services at the Fort Myer chapel included leading Capital correspondents, Joseph C. Grew, former Undersecretary of State and Ambassador to Japan; Dutch Ambassador Eelco Van Kleffens, former Representative George H. Tinkham (R., Mass.) and Michael J. McDermott, press assistant to the Secretary of State.

Hulen, who was 60 when he died last July 12 in an air crash at Bombay, India, was the senior reporter covering the State Department on the basis of length of service. He also was author of a book, "Inside the State Department."

His only survivor is his wife, Katherine, 3020 Dumbarton ave. nw.

D. C. Traffic Safer For Women Than Men, Figures Show

Washington traffic last month was safer for women than for men, according to statistics released yesterday by the Metropolitan Police.

Of the 192 pedestrians injured in November, the report shows, 115 were men and 77 were women.

The month's accident total was 1094, with four deaths and 733 injuries. This compares to 1170 accidents, 5 fatalities and 377 injuries for November, 1948. The major cause of mishaps was collisions, 195, with failure to yield right of way second with 170.

Won High Award

N.G. Tayman, Army Bridge Expert, Dies

Nelson G. Tayman, 51, bridge erection and demolition specialist in the Army's Office of the Chief of Engineers for the past six years and former District Highway Department expert, died Tuesday at Prince Georges General Hospital.

Mr. Tayman

American Legion services will be held at 8 p. m. today at Cheverly Legion Hall. Funeral services will follow Friday at 10 a. m. in the hall. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Tayman, who lived at 2710 Cheverly ave., Cheverly, received the War Department's highest civilian award in the China-Burma-India theater in 1944, for the bridges he designed and erected through the mountains between Burma and China.

He was with the District Highway Department from 1929-1943.

Born in Annapolis and graduated in civil engineering from St. John's College, he served in World War I as a lieutenant with the Army Engineers in France and later with the Army of Occupation in Germany. He was an assistant highway engineer for Arkansas before coming here.

A charter member and past commander of Cheverly Post No. 108, American Legion, he also belonged to Locale 265, 40 & 8, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Association of Engineers and Sigma Phi fraternity.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Betty Ross Tayman, widely known civic and political affairs leader; his father, John Tayman of Annapolis, and a brother, Arthur William Tayman, a Prince Georges County engineer.

Mrs. Ella F. Seider

Mrs. Ella Florence Seider, 89, mother of Mrs. Leon M. Betts, 3804 Ingomar st., Chevy Chase, died yesterday after a lingering illness.

A native of Xenia, Ohio, she came to Washington 10 years ago to live with her daughter. Her husband, who worked with Dun & Bradstreet Chicago offices, died 15 years ago.

Surviving in addition to Mrs. Betts are two grandchildren, David E. Betts, an attorney in Rockville, Md., and William F. Betts, a statistician with the Association of American Railroads.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Friday at the Chevy Chase funeral home, 5103 Wisconsin ave. nw. Burial will follow in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Snyder Sees 'Good Business'

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said yesterday he foresaw "continued good business" in the United States.

Talking to reporters, Snyder said that all the indications at this time point toward a very strong position for the American economy.

The Treasury head was asked if he expected another inflationary trend or a continuation of what is taking place now.

"Frankly," Snyder answered, "we are in a period when we will just have to observe the indicators.

"We are about to enter a period of year-end inventory adjustment and dividend declaration, which make it a difficult time to get a very clear projection, although all the factors are very strong.

NLRB Seeks Court Rule On ITU Case

The National Labor Relations Board decided yesterday to seek court enforcement of its order directing the AFL International Typographical Union to stop insisting on closed shop conditions.

The board acted in response to a request by Elisha Hanson, general counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, who told the board that a bulletin sent out by the union flouted the board's order.

Hanson also had requested the board to seek a temporary injunction to force the union to comply with the board order of October 29.

He said that instructions sent out by union officials to local officers on November 14 made it clear the union intends to "ignore the board's orders until such orders are enforced by a court."

Union and Officers Named

The October 29 order directed the ITU and its four top officers to stop causing employers to discriminate against employes in violation of the Taft-Hartley Act, to stop strike threats to force employers to engage in such discrimination, and to stop approving strike action for that purpose.

The four officers are President Woodruff Randolph, Vice Presidents Larry Taylor and Elmer Brown, and Secretary-Treasurer Don Hurd.

The board, in deciding to take its case to the United States Court of Appeals, will try to have its order given the standing of a court decree.

Failure to live up to the decree then would place the ITU in contempt of court, with possible fines and imprisonment for its officers as well as a levey against the union treasury.

Phony Kinsey Investigator Questions Recent Bride Here

Washington's first phony "Kinsey Investigator" of intimate sex matters was reported yesterday by a bride of several weeks.

The victim, Mrs. Shirley Shenker, 26 of 1445 Otis pl. nw., a graduate student in psychology at George Washington University, said she questioned at length over the telephone Tuesday, "on quite intimate sex questions."

Her caller, she said, identified himself as "Dr. Paul Stern, with the Kinsey Report—you've heard of us, of course."

A check with the publishers of the first Kinsey Report on "The Sexual Behavior of the Human Male" later revealed that its author, Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey, and his three investigators are currently working in California gathering material for the book's sequel, "The Sexual Behavior of the Human Female." Moreover, it was said, Washington is not included in the future itinerary.

As a further clincher, the publishing firm spokesman stated, Dr. Kinsey never interviews by telephone.

Store Profits Slump 48% In 9 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Faced with rising costs and dwindling sales, department store profits are showing a sharp decline this year.

Extent of the drop was indicated in a report yesterday from the National Retail Dry Goods Association showing that net earnings of 196 department stores fell 48.8 percent in the nine months ended October 31 as compared with the same 1948 period. Their costs of doing business were 6.8 percent higher.

Dollar sales of this same group of stores, each having annual sales of more than one million dollars, declined 7 percent in the same period. Dollar value of the average sale slid 5.7 percent, while the number of transactions was off only 1 percent.

"The breakeven point of retail stores throughout the country today has reached a critical point," according to Raymond F. Copes, general manager of the N.R.D.G.A. "Department stores and specialty stores are faced with the difficult problems created by declining gross margins and increased operating expenses."

ANNIVERSARY FETE: More than 200 attended the 17th anniversary party last night of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, in the Sheraton Hotel. Guest of honor was Mrsfl Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States, who spoke informally. Arthur B. Gunnarson, first president of the Washington Chapter, and now managing secretary of the national group, served as guest chairman. Max W. Shoup is chapter president.

NEW OFFICERS: J. Hicks Baldwin is the new president of the Life Insurance General Agents and Managers Association. He is general agent here of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. Other new officers elected Tuesday night are: Laurence W. Brown, jr., vice president, and C. Carney Smith, secretary-treasurer.

Baldwin

Directors are Claude A. Cook, Raymond H. Godine, J. Mitchell Owens and Chester R. Jones. The group plans a 17-week Round Table in Agency Management, scheduled to start the third week in January.

DIVIDEND: Directors of Industrial Bank of Washington declared the regular annual dividend of 6 percent a share on capital stock, payable January 24 to stock of record December 31. President Jesse H. Mitchell added that a bonus of 1 percent of annual salaries plus $5 for each year of service will be paid to employes. The board voted to transfer $25,000 from undivided profits to surplus, raising the latter to $175,000.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

	Week Ended December 7	Week Ended November 30
Total loans	$238,452,000	$239,168,000

Demand deposits	751,118,000	738,539,000
Time deposits	175,579,000	175,710,000

ODD LOTS: Atlas Corp. asked SEC authority to purchase from Ogden Corp., a subsidiary, 20,000 shares of Barnsdall Oil Co. common shares at approximately $52 a share . . . The National Savings Club, employes' organization of National Savings & Trust Co., last night held its annual Christmas party at the Columbia Country Club . . . Chevrolet Motors reported its domestic retail sales for the first 11 months totaled 1,317,200 cars and trucks, more than the previous 12-month peak record of 1,168,863 . . . Dun & Bradstreet reported business failures declined to 191 in the week ended December 8 from 221 the previous week . . . New steel prices, some higher and some lower, are reported "imminent" for United States Steel Corp. . . . Historical background of the Hoover Commission Report was outlined to members of Chesapeake Chapter, Robert Morris Associates, at a meeting in Hamilton Hotel.

Egg Prices Crack

Stanky, Dark of Braves Traded to Giants, Gerry Priddy Goes to Detroit as Big League Clubs Make Seven Deals

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Joe Cronin, general manager of the Red Sox, got up in meeting before the major league brass and shouted down a proposed refinement of the game. Let the second baseman and shortstops sweat it out, with no special privileges, on those double-play bust-ups, he said.

There was an attempt, you know, to write into the recodified rules a stiff punishment for the base runners who took off with spikes high into the laps of the men covering second. The gentler souls among the rules-makers wanted to rule out the rough stuff.

Povich

It was Cronin, a new member of the committee, and an old shortstop himself, who prevailed on the group not to sissify the game. "The shortstop or second baseman who gets to the big leagues ought to know how to protect himself," said Cronin. "If they get hurt, it's their own fault. And anyway, the play at second base and the blocking at the plate are the only claims we have to being a contact sport."

BUCKY HARRIS, like Cronin, was out of patience with any attempt to give the men around second base any special protection. "The game is getting too soft, anyway," said Harris. "A second baseman doesn't have to take all that stuff from the base runners. He has ways to get even."

Harris had his own way of retaliating, against Max Carey of the Pittsburgh Pirates, during the World Series of 1925. Carey, the flashing base runner, was getting on base, and giving Harris a hard time of it. As a manager, Bucky was able to take special steps. He issued an order to his catcher, Muddy Ruel.

"If you see Carey trying to steal second, let me have that ball," said Harris. "Never mind about trying to throw him out, just get that ball to me with a lot on it."

And it happened that way, the next time Carey tried to steal. Harris tagged Carey firmly—so firmly he went out of the game with two broken ribs.

HANK GREENBERG, newly eminent as the general manager and operating boss of the Cleveland Indians, cast a firm vote against the return of the spitball, when that topic reached the rules committee. But Greenberg's objections were not based on the traditional complains of the hitters who wanted none of the freak pitches restored to the game.

"The spitball is vulgar," said Greenberg. "Our women fans wouldn't like it."

The best comeback of the 1949 season was that of young Art Houtteman, the Detroit pitching rookie, who had won only one game the season before and turned in 14 wins last summer despite a near-fatal automobile accident in the spring.

"Houtteman is a happy kid," said Billy Evans, of the Tigers. "He admits he's lucky. He was telling me, 'I could have hurt my arm, or my shoulder, or twisted a knee, or suffered all of the other things that would have ruined me as a pitcher. But all that happened was a fractured skull'."

That deal of the White Sox and Athletics today, in which Connie Mack picked up Pitcher Ed Kleiman in a swap for the slowing third baseman, Hank Majeski, was not quite league-shaking.

"No cash involved," said a club official in announcing the deal. "And no talent, either," muttered a grumpy baseball writer.

THE BROWNS, who wound up with $200,000 in cash in their deals with the A's and Tigers that moved Bob Dillinger and Gerry Priddy to new teams, are the only club that was cash-minded at the meetings here.

With the rest of the clubs, money was no consideration, and in fact a drug on the market. They acted as if they were afraid to take dough for good ball players. Pravda and Tass could make much of this new hint of the instability of the United States banknote.

Detroit makes no bones about the "availability" of two of its players—Pitcher Dizzy Trout and Outfielder Dick Wakefield. Manager Red Rolfe would fain get rid of them both, but for widely contrasting reasons.

In the case of Trout, Rolfe is impatient with the big pitcher's grumbling that he gets only relief roles. "But," says Rolfe, "he can't break into my big five starting group, and grumbling about it won't help him."

Wakefield's status is somewhat different. "He's a good ball player, and a nice kid," says Rolfe. "He can't break into our outfield, either, but I'd like to ship him off for another reason. He's taking an awful beating from our Detroit fans, and I want him away from there before they break his heart."

Big-Time Hopes Quashed

St. Louis U. Drops Football; Cost $200,000 in 2 Years

St. Louis, Dec. 14 (AP).—St. Louis University, one of the oldest schools west of the Mississippi River, is dropping intercollegiate football—chiefly because it has proved too costly.

The announcement was made today by the Catholic University's president, the Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert.

Head Coach Joe Maniaci and his assistants lost their jobs. Their three-year contracts had a year to run, but the university reached a settlement with them.

Abandonment of football came after one of the school's most disastrous seasons, both on the field and at the turnstiles. The team lost six games, tied one and won two this year. Attendance at five home games was only 35,797.

St. Louis newspapers reported that the past two football seasons set the school back at least $200,000.

Today's announcement indicated a sharp reversal in the university's attitude toward football. When Maniaci was hired two years ago, officials said publicly they were out to crack the big-time gridiron ranks.

The university has had a varsity football team since 1886, with the exception of two war years.

What will be done about the school's scheduled football games for 1950 and 1951 was not announced.

Father Reinert said that academic considerations also played an important part in the decision. The President's statement stated in part:

"Experience shows today if a large university is to meet its highly specialized football rivals on an equal competitive basis, it is almost imperative that scholastic sacrifices be deliberately accepted.

Baylor Coach Comes Back

Waco, Dec. 14 (AP).—Young Bob Woodruff, who rebuilt Baylor's sagging gridiron fortunes, will continue as head coach.

Less than a week after resigning because of friction with Athletic Director Ralph Wolf, Woodruff accepted the $12,000-a-year job back today while Wolf became vice president and general manager of the new Baylor stadium.

Woodruff quit Friday night and Wolf also resigned Saturday, stating he was doing so to "clear the atmosphere."

At the time a compromise had been worked out by the athletic committee under which Wolf would continue as athletic director but eventually would become stadium director.

The trouble between Woodruff and Wolf was never disclosed. The best reports were that Woodruff wanted to conduct the athletic department on a larger scale—and more expensively — than Wolf thought proper. There also were reports of differences over scheduling and the mode of travel used for the football team.

Announcement that Woodruff and Wolf would remain with Baylor—neither resignation had been accepted—came from Dr. W. R. White, president of the university.

Caps Hold Macauley to 9 Points, Win By 79 to 61

Chick Halbert and Jack Nichols teamed up to hold Easy Ed Macauley to nine points last night as the Washington Caps defeated the St. Louis Bombers, 79 to 61.

A slim Uline Arena gathering of only 1374 saw the Caps score their second straight National Basketball Association triumph and bring their season's mark to 10 wins and nine losses.

Norlander Hot Early

Johnny Norlander, veteran Cap forward, got the locals off on the right foot with a hot first quarter, scoring 13 points in the first 12 minutes of play to give his team a lead it never relinquished. Norlander's 15 points paced both clubs.

Belus Smawley Johnny Orr and Macauley enjoyed hot hands in the third quarter when the Bombers pulled to within 6 points of the Caps, but O'Keefe and Freddie Scolari started a Caps counterattack and the Bombers soon fell back.

Katkaveck Starts Rally

Leo Katkaveck, who has seen little action recently, chucked in three field goals when most needed in the last stanza, while O'Keefe's sharpshooting down the stretch enabled him to tie Scolari for runner-up scoring honors with 15 points.

Scolari and Coach Bob Feerick paced the second quarter as the Capitols retained their nine-point margin, holding a 37-28 command at intermission.

Orr started rolling in the third quarter, and the Bombers had reduced Washington's advantage to 53-47 at the end of the third stanza.

Terps' Players Worried Over Tatum Report

The University of Maryland football squad yesterday went through its first hard workout since the Terps' 13-0 victory over Miami December 2.

Assistant Coach Jack Hennemeir sent them through a long scrimmage in preparation for the 'Gator Bowl contest against Missouri January 2 in Jacksonville.

Coach Jim Tatum has been speechmaking in Jacksonville.

The trip had given rise to rumors that Tatum might be signed as head coach of the University of Florida.

His Maryland football players were worried about the report and there was a lot of pre-practice dressing room talk about it.

So much so that Hennemeir called them together to explain that Tatum went South merely to fulfill a part of the 'Gator Bowl contract which called for him to make a talk in Jacksonville.

The rugged squad went to it with vim and vigor in the scrimmage.

A. U.-Penn State, Roanoke-Catholic Clash Tonight

All three local Mason-Dixon conference basketball teams are in action tonight.

American University, with a 2-2 record, is host to Penn State, 3-1, in an 8:45 game at Uline Arena.

Catholic University matches its 2-1 record against Roanoke College in the C. U. gym at 8:30. Roanoke beat Bridgewater and Mount St. Mary's, but lost to Virginia.

Winless Gallaudet makes its third start, facing Bridgewater at Bridgewater, Va.

Also tonight, Quantico's Marines play Wake Forest at Quantico, 8:30.

Mercer-Austeri Grapple to Draw

Marvin Mercer and Jim Austeri wrestled to a one-hour draw in the finals of the junior heavyweight tournament last night at Turner's Arena.

In other matches, Natie Brown and Laverne Baxter were both disqualified by Referee Claudio Villar and the bout declared no contest. Ivan Kamaroff and Pat O'Hara drew in 30 minutes; Tony Consenza won in 12 minutes by disqualification from Jack Kelly and Al Calza defeated Joe Kamaroff in 13 minutes with a body press.

Defends Dillinger, Priddy Sales

DeWitt, Browns Prexy, Says Club Rebuilding With Youth

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—The St. Louis sale today of Bob Dillinger and Gerry Priddy, two of its brightest stars, brought speculation on the Browns' future.

Nearly every time Bill DeWitt, the president of the Browns, turns a corner, he is accosted by some one who wants to know whether the club is broke, does he intend to sell or or is he considering moving the franchise to Los Angeles. Obviously irked by all these questions, the handsome, bespectacled owner made his stand clear "once and for all."

"Let's get this on the record and let's get it straight," he said. "We are not broke. We don't have to pay off a mortgage. We may be selling ball players, but not clubs. And we are giving no consideration to moving the franchise to Los Angeles or any other city.

"Of course, conditions may force us to change our minds," he continued, "but right now we are interested in building up a contender in St. Louis. When we took over the Browns last year we set up a five-year plan. It was based on youth and speed. We are going along on that basis. And I dare say we are making progress, even if it isn't too obvious."

DEWITT defended his sale of Priddy and Dillinger to Detroit and the Philadelphia Athletics, respectively, for whom he collected $200,000 in addition to five players, all under 30 years of age.

"It should be no secret why we sold them," he insisted. 'We drew only 270,000 last season. That didn't take care of our expenses. The only way we can make up the difference is to sell."

"However, we're building a young club around Outfielders Roy Sievers and Dick Kokos, Infielders Owen Friend and Bill Sommers and Pitchers Ned Garver, Cliff Fannin, Al Widmar and Rookie Ed Albrecht," DeWitt said. "All are 25 or under. By 1953, when the five-year plan is up, all of these players should develop into full-fledged stars. Men like Priddy and Dillinger will be past their peak. That's why we sold them."

Ed Stanky Happy He Is Back With Leo, His Type of Pilot

MOBILE, ALA., Dec. 14 (AP).—Eddie Stanky said today Leo Durocher was his type manager and that he was happy to be back with his old boss.

Advised of his trade to the New York Giants after coming in from a fishing trip, Stanky indicated the switch didn't come as a complete surprise.

When Durocher, as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, authorized Stanky's trade to the Boston Braves the fiery little second baseman was quoted as saying "I've been stabbed in the back by my manager."

Asked about that today, Stanky replied:

"I have been loyal to every manager I have ever played for and I have been playing the game for 15 years.

"There isn't any manager who ever accused me of loafing or of not giving everything I had on the field at all times. That is the only way I know how to play the game.

"I have never been fined in my life by a manager on the field or off the field. I have been quoted after I was traded to the Braves. I said I always respected Leo Durocher's ability on the field. That still goes. In fact he is my type of manager.

"I am finally playing for the fellow again and all I can say is I am happy to be back with him."

Stanky sidestepped queries about affairs within the Braves' camp.

Those Wondering Nats

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

I CAN'T figure out why everybody is so het up at Clark Griffith because our Nats haven't made a trade yet.

They haven't been calling him the "Old Fox" all these years for nothing. He knows what he's doing.

Without even making a move at the major league meetings in New York, Griff improved our position in the American League by at least one notch.

He sat back and watched the seventh-place Browns trade off their three best ballplayers, Bob Dillinger, Gerry Priddy and Paul Lehner. Now we're a cinch to beat them out next season.

He's playing it smart by being patient. After all, the season doesn't start until April 20.

Griff knows that the Yanks and Red Sox are hot after Eddie Robinson, Ray Scarborough, Ed Stewart, Clyde Vollmer and Paul Calvert. They've made only fair offers for them.

THE "OLD FOX" also knows that those teams will get desperate for our swell players in a couple of months and make even better offers.

If the Red Sox, and Yanks don't come through with good offers, we'll still be well next year. The last two weeks of last season we were a tough club to lick. Ask the Red Sox, whom we knocked out of the pennant, and the Yankees, whom we almost knocked out.

Besides, since then Griff reached down into the treasury and bought the Pacific Coast League's most valuable player, Outfielder Irv Noren, and he drafted Pitcher Steve Nagy and Infielder George Genovese and Catcher Newton Grasso from the same league.

Don't laugh those draft choices off. Remember, they laughed a few years ago when Griff drafted Dutch Leonard after he'd flopped in the National League. Leonard turned out a 20-game winner.

Griff knows what he's doing. Let's be patient.

Griff Makes No Trades, But Still Has Hopes

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, Dec. 14—Negotiations between the Nats and the Yankees, on-again off-again for the past week, suddenly came alive once more late today, and Clark Griffith hinted strongly there may yet be a player deal, "perhaps tomorrow."

The Nats' owner and his front-office delegation departed from the New York trade meeting empty-handed this afternoon, but according to Griffith they left with the Yankees "a deal they asked more time to consider. They will contact me tomorrow."

First Baseman Eddie Robinson is the chief objective of the Yankees, and was offered by Griffith in a proposed swap for Second Baseman George Stirnweiss, First Baseman Dick Kryhoski and Pitcher Don Johnson.

Yankees Demand Pitcher

The Yankees countered with a demand that a Washington pitcher, not Ray Scarborough, be tossed into the deal. Griffith met that with a demand that the Yanks toss in another player to make it a four-for-two trade. The final hours of the New York sessions saw Griffith, Bucky Harris, Yankee General Manager George Weiss and Casey Stengel in late conferences that bordered on the frantic.

They met in their hotel suites, adjourned to the lobbies, and renewed their talks on the steps as Griffith waited for a cab that would take him to his train for Washington.

On one point, at least, they were closer to a deal. The Yankees agreed that Kryhoski would be included, after first offering Joe Collins as the first baseman who would go to Washington. Harris persistently held out for Kryhoski.

All prospects that the Nats might figure in a three-cornered deal involving Detroit vanished when the Tigers announced their purchase of Jerry Priddy from the Browns, thus solving their second base problem.

Until then, the Nats were interested in dealing off Stirnweiss to the Tigers if the Yankee trade went through. In return they were to get Dick Wakefield, but those ideas went out the window. There were talks this morning between Griffith and General Manager Frank Lane of the White Sox. They wound up in futility.

Chisox Deal Off

The Nats proffered Robinson and Al Kozar to the Chicago club for Second Baseman Cass Michaels and First Baseman Charley Kress, but Lane held out for a third Washington player.

Then it was that with the Chicago deal cold, the Nats renewed their negotiations with the Yanks, who incidentally have manifested some alarm at the strengthening of the Tigers, and were more pliable in their talks with Griffith.

Navy Blasts Virginia, 61-38

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 14 (AP).—Stretching its lead with almost every minute, Navy whipped Virginia at basketball today, 61-38.

Center Willie Wilson, a ball hawk under the boards, led the Midshipmen to their third straight victory with seven goals and four foul shots for 18 points.

It was Virginia's second loss against four wins.

Boston Gets Kerr, Marshall and Gordon

Tigers Give Browns $100,000, Pitcher For Ex-Nat; Cards Buy Harry Walker

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—The baseball trade dam burst today under pressure of a million dollars' worth of deals, including a jolting six-man swap between the New York Giants and Boston Braves.

Here are the big ones in the last 24 hours:

1. Outfielder Willard Marshall, Outfielder-Third Baseman Sid Gordon, Shortstop Buddy Kerr and Pitcher Sam Webb of the Giants to the Braves for Shortstop Alvin Dark and Second Baseman Eddie Stanky.
2. Second baseman Gerry Priddy of the St. Louis Browns to Detroit for Pitcher Lou Kretlow and cash in excess of $100,000.
3. Third Baseman Hank Majeski of the Philadelphia A's to the Chicago White Sox for Pitcher Ed Klieman.
4. Third Baseman Bob Dillinger and Outfielder Paul Lehner of the St. Louis Browns to the A's for Shortstop Billy DeMars, Third Baseman Frank Gustine, Outfielders Ray Coleman and Rocco Ippolitto and $100,000.
5. Pitcher Bill Voiselle of the Boston Braves to the Chicago Cubs for Infielder Gene Mauch and cash.
6. Outfielder Marv Rickert of the Boston Braves to Pittsburgh for cash and an unnamed minor league player.
7. Outfielder Ron Northey and Infielder Lou Klein of the St. Louis Cardinals to Cincinnati for Outfielder Harry Walker and an unnamed minor league player.

Far and away the big news of the day was the six-man transaction by which both the Giants and Braves acquired key men. It could be one of the most important trades in recent years.

Dark, the Associated Press Rookie of the Year in 1948, is a top-flight shortstop, who slumped to .276 last season. Only 26, the former Louisiana State University football star will anchor Manager Leo Durocher's infield.

Boston hesitated for many days before deciding to give up Dark, the most important player in the swap. Negotiations between the two clubs had been going on since the World Series.

Stanky, Durocher Together

Manager Billy Southworth of the Braves placed Dark on his "no trade" list. The Giants had Gordon in the same category. When New York agreed to put Gordon in the deal, Billy gave up Dark.

Stanky, of course, is the peppery former Brooklyn Dodger second baseman who returns to his old manager, Durocher, at last. When Stanky, now 32, was sold to Boston in March of 1948, he was quoted as saying, "My pal Leo stabbed me in the back." That is supposed to be all patched up now.

A broken ankle suffered in the '48 season slowed down Stanky, who is the best man in the majors, at working a pitcher for a base on balls. Last year he hit .285 in 138 games. He and Dark give the Giants the same second base combination that carried the Braves to the pennant in '48.

Gordon Hits Long Ball

Gordon, 31, was most popular with the Giants as he was a hometown boy from Brooklyn. Playing outfield, third base and some times first base, Sid heard a few weeks ago that Durocher was going to try him catching. A righthanded long ball hitter, one of the most valuable trading commodities this season, Gordon smashed 26 homers and drove in 90 runs for the Giants last season. He hit .284.

Southworth said he planned to use Gordon in left field, with Marshall in right and Rookie Sam Jethroe in center. Marshall, 28, batted .307 for the Giants in 1949, eighth in the league among the regulars.

It was a cinch all winter that Kerr was sure to be traded. He played only 90 games last season, hitting but .209 under Durocher. Buddy and Leo did not always see eye to eye to put it mildly.

At Boston, Kerr will be the regular shortstop. Many think he

Majors Vote To Throw Out Bonus Rule

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—The major leagues voted to repeal baseball's bonus rule today on the tie-breaking vote of Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

Chandler's ballot decided the issue as the American League wanted repeal and the National League favored retention of the controversial rule.

Now the measure goes back to the minors, who rejected it last week. They will be asked to reconsider the repeal amendment to the major-minor code in a mail vote. If the minors junk the rule, there will be no such thing as a "bonus player" next year.

Commissioner Chandler was optimistic that the minors would change their minds and toss out the rule.

Repeal failed to get the required three-fourths vote at the minor league convention in Baltimore last Thursday.

Before casting his vote Chandler said he felt the rule had failed in its purpose to equalize the competition for young players and that its enforcement was difficult.

As expected, the commissioner took no part in the move for a uniform tie playoff system. Each league will continue as in the past—one game in the American and best-of-three in the National.

A new high school rule will be drafted to include the clarifying provision that a boy may be signed after his "original" class has graduated. However, a proposal to ban signing of college baseball players until graduation was turned down.

Chandler Profits, Too, With $15,000 Raise

New York, Dec. 14.—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler himself got a bit of the cash that suddenly started being passed out at the major league meeting today.

Chandler received a $15,000 a year pay boost to raise his salary to $65,000. His cnotract expires in April of 1952 but the raise goes into effect January 1, 1950.

Unbeaten Georgetown Downs Penn State, 70-63; Terps Bow, 54-52

O'Keefe Gets 21 as Hoyas Score 4th

Georgetown's Hoyas kept their undefeated record intact last night as they whipped Penn State, 70-63, before 464 at the National Guard Armory. It was the Hoyas' fourth straight win.

Tommy O'Keefe and Johnny Brown led the Hoyas with 21 and 12 points. Rangy Marty Costa, southpaw hook shot artist, slammed in 20 for the Nittany Lions, who dropped their first game in two starts.

The Lions held the Hoyas to an 18-18 tie in the first 10 minutes before Penn State inserted its second team, Brown, then began slicing through the Lions' zone defense and the Hoyas moved ahead to 36-24, at intermission.

Penn State's first team returned to action and whittled the Hoya's bulge down to 42-36.

Paced by O'Keefe, who sank 10 out of 14 field goal tries, G. U. rolled to a 70-55 lead with two minutes left.

Penn Beats Terps In Thriller, 54-52

Special Dispatch to The Post

Philadelphia, Dec. 14 — Maryland overcame a nine point deficit late in the second half but still dropped a 54-52 decision to Penn here tonight before 2500 spectators.

It was heartbreaking for the Terrapins to drop their fourth game in five starts after they had rallied from a 45-36 disadvantage with nine minutes to play. But a tip-in goal with 30 seconds to play provided Penn with its winning margin.

Dick Koffenberger sank one from the corner with 40 seconds to play for a 52-51 edge for Maryland. Penn's Hugh Jefferies missed a long shot, but in the wild melee under the basket for possession, Herb Lyon tapped the ball into the hoop with 30 seconds left.

Penn added a free throw seconds later for its 54th point.

Coaches Want More Specific Rule

'Personal Foul' Is Too General

By Irving T. Marsh
New York Herald Tribune Writer

(Last in a series of three articles on college football rules and trends.)

FOOTBALL coaches cannot agree 100 percent on anything, unless it is the fact that they need a few more good guards and/or tackles, but on one point in the 1949 football-playing code they are in as much accord as they can ever hope to be.

Seventy-eight percent of them, according to the third question in the New York Herald Tribune's survey on this year's gridiron strategies and rules, are opposed to the current method of calling "personal fouls" and are in favor of making the reason behind that 15-yard penalty more explicit.

There's a colored handkerchief on the play

This year the rules committee grouped a large number of violations like tripping, striking an opponent above the knee (slugging), piling on, unnecessary roughness, hurdling, unsportsmanlike conduct into one category which the official signaled as a "personal foul." Before that, of course, each infraction had been called exactly by what it was. The 1949 rule, some observers felt, made for confusion in the minds of spectators, coaches and players and also, acording to these same observers, placed the official calling the infraction in the wrong light.

So, the third question in the Herald Tribune's survey, mailed to 500 coaches throughout the country and answered by close to 400 of them, (although not all answered the third question), asked this:

"Are you in favor of making personal fouls more explicit, that is, to designate the so-called personal foul actually by the infraction?"

Here are the answers:

	No. of Answers	Pct.
Yes	271	78%
No	60	17
No opinion	16	5
	347	100%

The answers elicited several interesting suggestions for betterment, too. Almost 25 of the coaches added that they would like to see not only more explicit designation of the foul but also the man who committed the foul, just as is done in basketball.

Most of the coaches favored the change because of the confusion it has produced. One caustic coach wrote:

"Too frequently under the present system even a coach has to make use of the crystal ball to try to figure out what's going on."

Said another: "The fans pay to know exactly what the foul is and should not be denied that knowledge."

And another: "The coach is now the last one to know who commits the foul."

STILL others:

"It would make for a better check on our players."

"Too often the coach does not know what has happened and therefore may take the wrong stand against officials."

"It might discourage players from fouling."

"It will help corect players' errors."

"It should be made more explicit to protect players and coaches from the unfavorable reaction in the minds of the spectators that the term 'personal foul' conjures up."

"It will create a better attitude among spectators."

"It would put a check on officials."

"We have had fouls called this year that never have occurred before."

"As now used it covers too much territory."

Quite a few of the coaches had definite suggestions to make, which, they thought, would aid.

IN ADDITION to the designation of the actual offender, some of the ideas advanced:

"I am in favor of such an extent that deliberate roughness or maiming would expel the player from the game."

"Each official should have a different colored marker to drop so we can all tell who called the foul."

"I am definitely in favor, and also in favor of making the personal foul penalty more severe. I have seen more slugging matches this year than ever before."

"Disqualify a player for two or three such fouls, as they do in basketball."

"A penalty of half the distance to the goal line for slugging should go back into the book."

On the other side, the chief reason for leaving the rule alone is that a change might put even more of a burden on officials than they now have. The officials job is tough enough now, one coach thought, and added, the game is overofficiated anyway.

Other expressions of anti-opinion:

"I think it would be embarrassing to the individual player who hight have made a mistake."

"I do not favor making fouls more explicit. For this reason: In basketball, too many officials take delight in imitating the infraction, thus putting the offender in a very embarrassing position. If this were to be applied to football the fans may get the idea that the offender is a 'dirty' player."

"THE objective of the game is participation and aggressiveness. Why make a culprit out of a player in incidental fouls."

Along the same line:

A pleading note crept into one answer:

"Please, let's leave the rules

Offenders may feel a bit embarrassed

alone now and for a long time to come."

At any rate, the objections to a change weren't too strong as too numerous. As a matter of fact, several coaches thought it didn't make much difference.

Summing up the survey, in the two previous questions asked, coachly opinion was:

1. Do you favor the two-platoon system and has it helped or hurt football? Helped—48 percent. Hurt—32 percent. Helped big, hurt small—7.5 percent. The remaining answers were divided.

2. Are you in favor of the present substitution rule? No—62 percent. Yes—32 percent. The rest were divided.

It was also nice to get an addendum from one of the coaches:

"Thanks exceedingly," he said, "for giving us an opportunity of airing our views."

Undoubtedly they will be aired further before the rules committee next month.

Navy to Play Northwestern, USC at Home

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 14 (AP).—Navy today announced another rugged football schedule for itself in 1950.

Seven of the teams the Midshipmen faced this season, including Notre Dame, will be played again next year. Two newcomers are Maryland, replacing Duke, and Northwestern, instead of Wisconsin.

Capt. H. H. Caldwell, director of athletics, said Navy will play all its "home" games in Baltimore's municipal stadium.

The schedule:

September 30, Maryland at College Park.
October 7, Northwestern at Baltimore; 14, Princeton at Princeton; 21, Southern California at Baltimore; 28, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.
November 4, Notre Dame at Cleveland; 11, Tulane at Baltimore; 18, Columbia at New York.
December 2, Army at Philadelphia.

Nye House Wins

Nye House's Harold Jarman scored 31 points to account for nearly all of his team's scoring as Nye House defeated Merrick Boys' Club, 36-35, in a 120-pound basketball game last night on the losers' court.

Hoya Frosh Rout Marines, 75-41

Georgetown's freshman basketball team rolled to an easy 75-41 victory over Headquarters Marines in the preliminary to the G.U.-Penn State game last night at the Armory.

7 Deals Made In Majors

still has a chance to regain his early promise. A few years ago they were comparing him with Marty Marion and Pee Wee Reese. He's only 27 now.

Webb was the extra man in the deal, tossed in when the Braves insisted on "four for two." He is a bespectacled righthanded pitcher who had a 1-1 record with the Giants after a good year in Jersey City of the International League.

The Braves-Giants deal involves players whose total market value would exceed $500,000—the most important trade in years.

Detroit strengthened itself at a vital point by grabbing Priddy from the Brownies who need money. Priddy, 30, hit .296 in 1948 and .290 last season. Manager Red Rolfe of the Tigers knows all about Priddy from his Yankee days and expects great things of him.

If the Tigers can make another deal for a first baseman they'll be a real top contender for the pennant next summer. They tried to pry a first baseman from the Yanks but failed.

The Browns, who are forced to sell top talent to get needed cash, picked up more than $100,000 and Kretlow for Priddy. Kretlow, signed off the Enid, Okla. semi-pro champs a few years back, had a so-so 3-2 record for the Tigers. The six-foot-two righthander completed one of 10 starts. No doubt he'll take a regular turn with the Browns.

Connie Mack's Athletics bought and sold a third baseman overnight. They put up some heavy sugar to get Dillinger and outfielder Paul Lehner from the Browns for $100,000 cash and DeMars, Gustine, Coleman and Ippolitto.

With Dillinger, a .324 hitter the A's had no more use for Majeski. Hank was peddled to the White Sox for Klieman, a relief pitcher with a 2-0 record in 1949. Lehner, the fellow who sometimes wanders home without permission, hit .229 in 104 games.

Ox DaGrosa Named To Athletic Commission

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 14 (AP).—John (Ox) Dagrosa, 47-year-old former Temple University and Holy Cross College football coach, was appointed today to the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission.

At the same time, Gov. James H. Duff reappointed Chairman George J. Jones, Williamsport, and John W. Montgomery, McKeesport, to the board. It regulates boxing activities in Pennsylvania. Each of the jobs pays $7500 a year.

Delaware Park Applies For 32 Race Days

Wilmington, Dela., Dec. 14 (AP).—Delaware Park today applied for 32 days of racing in 1950 beginning Monday, May 20.

Howard Loses To Delaware

Delaware State handed Howard University a 59-49 defcat in the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association opener for both teams last night at Banneker.

Frank Booth of Howard was the game's high scorer with 19 points. Hutchinson Hart's 16 points were high for the winners.

Young Scamp Wins Charles Town Feature

Lawless Has 3 More Winners

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 14.—Young Scamp, bred at the former United States Army Remount Station across the mountain, scampered home the winner of the National Bohemian Purse here today. Sporting the colors of W. L. Curles and having Nick Shuk in the saddle, Young Scamp finished a length and a half in advance of P. Laudati's Sylmady with M. I. Brooks' Sunny South third in the field of eight.

Young Scamp, a busy 5-year-old, having started 34 times this year, turned in his fifth victory to the tune of a $21.40 mutuel and stepped the about 6 furlongs in 1:19 3/5 over a slow track.

Young Scamp was third and under restraint until Jockey Shuk gave him his head. Once asked for speed, Young Scamp responded and held on gamely ahead of the closing rush of Sylmady, ridden by Apprentice Dick Lawless.

While Lawless missed winning the feature, the New York youngster once again carried off riding honors. The cotton-topped youngster, who sits tight when his older saddle rivals get desperate, got home in front three times in the early part of the program.

Lawless hit his stride in the first event today, winning with J. Morar's Dale Maedic, a $6.20 shot. This winner began a $13 pay-off on the daily double, completed when Nolan Griffith scored with Mrs. Vivian Fitzgerald's Gay Pilate, a $4.20 choice.

Lawless' next winner came in the fourth race. He drove H. Johnson's Main Bet from far back to win going away to bring his backers a $7 mutuel. He came back in the fifth race to win aboard M. Stanfield's Top Raider, the 4-year-old paying an $8.40 mutuel.

Coffee Cost Up $650 Millions, Gillette Holds

By The Associated Press

Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) said yesterday that "manipulation of the coffee market" during October and November cost American consumers 650 million dollars.

Gillette is chairman of a Senate Agriculture subcommittee that has been taking testimony on the sharp increase in coffee prices.

Gillette said he felt there was "definite manipulation" but that it "apparently was not illegal or in violation of the law so there is little we can do about it but talk."

"The skyrocketing of prices has been stopped," Gillette added.

Sees No Cut in Shoe Prices

Byron A. Gray, president of the International Shoe Co. of St. Louis, told the committee yesterday that he sees no prospects for lower prices on shoes for the next year or longer.

Both Gray and George Coppers, president of the National Biscuit Co. of New York, contended it was "fair and reasonable" for corporations to double their profits compared with 10 years ago.

They argued that costs of material, labor, transportation, taxes, and other expenses, have more than doubled and that profit must keep pace in order for a firm to stay in business.

The Agriculture Department announced, meanwhile, it will reenter the lard and pork fat market for the first time in many months to obtain supplies for Germany.

The buying is expected to have a bolstering effect on current hog prices.

Shortage Of Coal Held 'Critical'

Chicago, Dec. 14 (AP).—A coal industry spokesman today said coal is moving into furnaces directly from the coal car and that any freight tieup from winter's storms would create a serious situation.

B. R. Urheim, of Chicago, secretary of the American Retail Coal Association, said the coal shortage is becoming "very critical" throughout the country.

Executive committee members of the association are meeting here to discuss the shortage. They may ask President Truman to intervene.

Urheim said coal supply conditions under John L. Lewis' three-day work week are more serious now than when the full-blown coal strike ended. The worst of winter is just ahead and stockpiles are gone, he said.

Coal Negotiations Report 'Progress'

New York, Dec. 14 (AP) — The United Mine Workers and hard coal operators reported "some progress" for the first time today in their efforts to agree on a new contract.

UMW Vice President Thomas Kennedy said after a two-hour bargaining session today: "We've made some progress."

Edward Griffith, head of the operator negotiators, said he agreed with Kennedy's statement. He added, however, that "no conclusions" on disputed points have been reached.

The union is seeking to raise the daily base pay from $14.05 to $15 and to double the 20-cents-a-ton payment by operators for the union welfare fund.

Cotton Areas Voting Today On Controls

By Ovid Martin
Associated Press Reporter

The Nation's cotton farmers will vote in an Agriculture Department referendum today on the question whether they favor return to prewar production controls for next year's crop.

The department, which holds more than 600 million dollars worth of the fiber acquired under a smaller crop is necessary to prepare price support programs, has said vent a top-heavy surplus.

The balloting—to be conducted in 20 cotton-growing States of the South and West—will be held under a cloud of widespread grower dissatisfaction with the shares in next year's crop allotted to individual farms.

Replying to some appeals, the department said yesterday it was without legal authority to remedy reported inequities. It added that Congress still can act before the planting season.

Specifically, growers will vote "yes" or "no" on the question whether they favor marketing quotas.

An affirmative vote of at least two thirds of those voting is required.

Despite grower complaints, officials expressed confidence quotas will be approved.

THERE'S MORE THAN ONE KIND OF "PIN-UP"!

Of course, practically ALL "pin-ups" are figures . . . our BULLETIN BOARD at PEOPLES LIQUORS is no exception!
But, ours are different . . . they're price figures. They're proof that there's no better buy, wherever you try.
It works like this:
We're pinning all liquor ads from other stores on our bulletin board. Come in and read our competitors' prices. Step up to our counter and buy with confidence, and . . .
We'll beat them • • • or meet them
Don't waste time chasing all over town for the most attractive figures. With our "PIN-UP" system, you're bound to find them right here.

Station WWDC Sold to Ohio Farmer Group

Radio station WWDC was sold yesterday for approximately $125,000 to a subsidiary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Both AM and FM physical facilities were disposed of by the Capital Broadcasting Co. which recently purchased facilities of station WOL from the Cowles Broadcasting Co.

The WWDC purchaser is the Peoples Broadcasting Corp., a subsidiary of the Farm Bureau's Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. The insurance firm is headed by Murray Lincoln, much discussed as a possible candidate in the 1950 Senate race against Senator Robert A. Taft.

If the FCC approves yesterday's transaction, the Peoples Broadcasting Corp. will use the letters WOL at 1450 on the dial with 500 watts while Capital Broadcasting will retain its WWDC call letters, operating at 1260 on the dial with 5000 watts. Peoples now owns station WRFD in Worthington, Ohio, a Columbus suburb.

Dewey Names Lyon To Elliott Bell's Post

Albany, Dec. 14 (U.P.) — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today appointed William A. Lyon of Brooklyn to the $16,500 post of State superintendent of banks, suceeding Elliott V. Bell.

Lyon, 47, is now serving as first deputy superintendent. He will take office Jan. 1, when Bell leaves State service to join the McGraw-Hill Book Publishing Co. of New York City.

Koussevitzky Foundation Created Here

Serge Koussevitsky, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has established a foundation in the Library of Congress.

The initial endowment is over $100,000 and is for the furtherance of modern composition. The announcement was made yesterday by Luther H. Evans, Librarian of Congress.

Since 1942 the Koussevitsky Music Foundation has commissioned scores from outstanding American and European composers. The best known work resulting from the commissions is the opera "Peter Grimes" by Benjamin Britten.

The Koussevitsky Foundation is primarily interested in assisting in the composition of new works. However, Dr. Harold Spivacke, chief of the Music Division of the Library, said yesterday, "It is possible that the Koussevitsky Foundation may from time to time sponsor performances of the works it commissions."

An advisory board to the Koussevitsky Foundation in the Library has been established. Its members include Dr. and Mrs. Koussevitsky, Aaron Copland, Howard Hanson, Gregor Piatigorsky, William Schuman, Richard Burgin, and Leonard Bernstein, in addition to Dr. Spivacke.

The Secret of Personal Power

To Lead Men, You Must Know Their Hearts

By David Guy Powers

Instructor of Instructors at the Dale Carnegie Institute

(A condensation of the book, "Live a New Live," Doubleday & Co., Inc. Copyright by David Guy Powers. All rights reserved.)

Chapter Five

DURING the French Revolution an officer was found running furiously down the street after his deserting soldiers.

When he was challenged, he exclaimed, "but I must follow them. I am their leader."

The officer had discovered the secret of leadership. He had discovered that to lead men you must be at one with the hearts of men.

You must take your course from them, and personalize the goals for which they will work and even die. You cannot give them such causes, you can only find them out.

For to lead men you must be as the moon, not the sun. You cannot shine upon them, you must reflect them.

The Officers' Training Manual of the United States Army puts the answer this way: "Your men come first."

If you acquire this spirit, men will follow you. If you can't, find someone you can follow.

Navy Story

DURING the war, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal became interested in the relationships of officers and men. Questionnaires were sent out to the Navy enlisted men asking, "Would you like to be an officer?"

Comdr. John Caples suggested it might be interesting to add the question "Why?"

This was done. One reply was most revealing. It read:

"Would you like to be an officer?"

"No!"

"Why?"

"Because I could never build myself up to be that low."

Some officer had failed to win this man's respect. He had assumed that rank carries respect. But it never does. The respect of the office boy must be earned by the executive. And those in lower positions are apt to be more sensitive, and more acutely critical.

Lehman's Counsel

LEADERSHIP in public life has the same characteristic of respect and confidence. Listen to Herbert H. Lehman, a statesman of the first rank.

"I believe," Governor Lehman wrote to me, "that the degree of leadership that any individual in public life may exert is in direct proportion to the confidence which the public has in that individual.

"Save in exceptional cases, I have found that public confidence is not developed so much through individual or dramatic instances in the life of public officials as by general impressions that people have formed of their sincerity, good will and desire to serve without self-interest.

"I have known very few men who for any extended period of time demonstrated real leadership who have not understood others."

Henry Ford 2d, president of the Ford Motor Co., recently established a research and engineering center estimated to cost 50 million dollars.

A vast part of this center is to be devoted to human engineering. I asked Henry Ford exactly what he had in mind.

He said: "There is a vast area in which we are only beginning to make significant progress—what we might call the field of human engineering. Machines alone do not give us mass production. Mass production is achieved by both machines and men.

"And while we have gone a very long way toward perfecting our mechanical operations we have not successfully written into our equations the complex factor that represents man, the human element.

"This is one of the many important problems we hope to tackle at our new research center. We need to know more about the 'human equation' in making things as well as the 'human equation' in buying things."

Research Defined

WHEN Charles F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors, was asked to define research, he replied, "You see, research is just about 10 percent experiment and 90 percent knowing how to get along with the fellows you're working with."

In the papers of President Roosevelt, President Harry Truman found this undelivered speech: "We are faced with the preeminent fact that, if civilization is to survive, we must cultivate the science of human relationships—the ability of all peoples, of all kinds, to live and work together, in the same world, at peace."

If you would lead men, do this:

1. Develop a genuine interest in others.

2. Make the cause of those you wish to lead your cause.

3. Remember: The successful shepherd thinks like his sheep.

TOMORROW: There Are Times When It Is Much Wiser to Listen Than to Talk.

Norman Thomas Quits Running for Office

Fall River, Mass., Dec. 14 (AP).—Norman Thomas is through seeking political office.

The Socialist party candidate in the last six presidential elections told a forum meeting at Temple Beth El last night that he will not run for office again.

Thomas, now 65, also sought the Governorship of New York in 1924 and was a candidate for Mayor of New York twice.

1000 Flee Homes As Ammonia Gas Drifts Over City

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 14 (AP).—Upward of 1000 persons were forced to flee their homes before dawn today as waves of ammonia gas spread through 20 square blocks of West Oakland.

Scores were overcome and many made ill. Five were known to have been hospitalized.

A tank car, filled with liquid ammonia, was being pumped out at a fertilizer plant when a pipe split and the cargo spilled into the streets. Gas formed quickly.

Eight police cars, with sirens screeching, moved through the residential area warning persons to flee.

Gas-masked firemen attempted to wash away the ammonia with streams of water. It was several hours later before evacuees began returning to their homes.

9 at Maryland U. Get Commissions

Nine University of Maryland ROTC students have been appointed second lieutentants in the Army, the Department of the Army announced yesterday.

Included among the new officers, selected on the basis of "distinguished" records in military science and tactics courses, are James M. Henderson, Chevy Chase, and Harold S. McGay and Russell Perry, Greenbelt, Transportation Corps, and James H. Johnson, Berwyn, and William E. White, Washington, Infantry.

Santa Needs Mule Train to Cart This Load

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

Red Cross Yule List Too Big for Reindeer

By Sonia Stein

MAYBE YOU think your Christmas list is long. How would you like to substitute this one: 600 baskets of fruit and cake, 200 pounds of hard candy, 5000 cookies, 4000 small Christmas stockings, 600 large stockings, 200 Christmas bells, 1000 Christmas tree ornaments, 85 wreaths?

And that's just part of the list of Christmas requests that the District Red Cross is trying to fill for hospitalized veterans and servicemen and for the patients at St. Elizabeths and Gallinger Hospitals this year.

Of course, the Red Cross doesn't expect you to change their list for yours. But if you could pick out one or two items on the list, and your neighbor could pick out one or two—it would add up to a Merry Christmas for a lot of invalids.

Many of the gifts have already been taken care of but there are many still to be bought and wrapped. Red Cross volunteers will gladly do your shopping for you. In fact, they've gone out on a limb and made some of the necessary purchases already out of emergency funds, and are just hoping that contributions will come in to make up the amount. In buying fruit and other perishables, they've found it more practical to buy in large quantities and with an eye to what will and what won't squash. But gifts of fruit are still most welcome.

Guide to Giving

THE RED CROSS knows that many contributors enjoy shopping for the gifts themselves and encourages that idea, too. For those in doubt about what is needed, there is always someone on duty at RE. 8300, ext. 2057 to guide you in your giving.

Small items to fill the stockings—or money with which to buy such items—are still needed, and more than 200 gifts for patients at Mount Alto must be brought in. The deadline has been extended to Tuesday, December 20, in an effort to get this 1949 Christmas job done as completely as possible. Volunteers are giving up their own Christmas shopping time to shop and wrap and decorate for the hospitals.

The activity is chiefly localized at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw., where the Red Cross subdivision of Santa Claus' elves is busy stuffing stockings with toilet articles, pen and pencil sets, games and other small surprises. (Wash cloths, soap, facial tissues, cigarettes, handkerchiefs, face powder and such inexpensive items are very much appreciated by patients, the Red Cross has discovered.)

Red Cross gifts aren't lavish, but they are always gaily wrapped and distributed on time, which is why it's so important to get the contrjbutions in soon.

Thousands on Their Way

THOUSANDS of stockings and thousands of boxes are filled and ready. Members of the Motor Corps have already taken some of the gifts to the hospitals where they are hidden away, like trains for junior, in the bottom of the closet. Last Christmas, the corps traveled 700 miles subbing for Santa's reindeer, and expects to chalk up as big a total this year.

In the schools, the Junior Red Cross is stuffing some of the smaller stockings for veterans' hospitals and an additional 3500 for Children's Hospital.

See CROSS, Page 8, Column 1

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

GIFTS for Red Cross Christmas stockings are checked off carefully, so that would-be contributors can be told which items are still needed and which ones are already on hand. At left, Mrs. J. C. Richards, who is credited with having made "thousands" of curtains for Red Cross rooms, tries her hand at filling stockings. Mrs. Roderick W. MacKinnon, chairman of the Christmas projects committee, takes inventory of the stock, and Mrs. William T. Spence unpacks more gift items to stuff in the gay red stockings

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

THE Red Cross uses station wagons instead of reindeer and a sleigh when it plays Santa Claus. Mrs. R. H. Tenney of the Motor Corps loads boxes and bulging red Christmas stockings into a station wagon, as the finished gifts are moved from Walsh House to the hospitals. Last Christmas the Motor Corps drove 700 miles to transport gifts at Christmas time

Popcorn Balls Are Festive Yule Eating

Popcorn balls are just as much fun to make as they are to eat. So why not turn the family loose in the kitchen and have a party when you make your Christmas popcorn. The men can take charge of popping the corn while you fix the syrup. And when it comes to shaping the balls, everybody gets a hand in. Here is a recipe for Light Popcorn Balls, from Better Homes and Gardens magazine:

The ingredients are one cup sugar; one-half cup of water; one teaspoon vinegar; two tablespoons of light corn syrup; one-half teaspoon of salt; one tablespoon of butter or fortified margarine and six cups of popped corn.

Combine sugar, water, vinegar, light corn syrup and salt. Cook to the very-hard-ball stage at 265 degrees. Add one tablespoon of butter. Pour mixture over the popped corn. Now butter your hands and press the corn into balls, lightly but firmly. Let the balls cool on a cooky sheet or on waxed paper.

Popcorn trees — with green-tinted syrup and studded with candied cherry bits—also are easy to make. The trunk is a wide stick, from the drugstore, or a skewer. To make the trees, use a triangular form made by taping together two six-by-one-and-one-half inch strips and one three-by-one-and-one-half inch strip of cardboard. Make a slit in the base strip of cardboard to insert the tree trunk. After packing with corn, remove the form by cutting the tape.

Popcorn balls can be gift-wrapped in cellophane and tied with a ribbon for a festive note. Tuck a sprig of holly in the bow. Decorate with big red or gold stars and seals. They will say Merry Christmas to the youngsters in your block.

Recipe for Success:

Take an Ounce of Haworth, Add a Pinch of Machiavelli, Stir In Lewis—and Pray!

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

CHRISTMAS TIME the poor postman humpbacks under giddy greetings and a drift of invitations from Washington's bright kaleidoscope of foreign embassies. The colorful cards come from kindly friends—but who sends the bland white notes inviting one to share cheer and hospitality?

The embassy social secretaries, of course,—the ladies whose tireless, anonymous activity and diplomatic ingenuity make (and sometimes break) an embassy's popularity. The most omniscient of this small, select band are Mrs. Nathan Wyeth of the French Embassy, Miss Irene Boyle of the British, Miss Meta Evans of the Greek (and Egyptian), Mrs. Charles Wahl of the Brazilian and Miss Felipe Lancastere of the Portuguese.

See what they're up against! Last year, the French Embassy had over 6000 and the British, over 5000 invited guests, asked for a meal or a glass of wine; quite exclusive of those present at such official goings-on as the giving of decorations, charity bazaars and fashion shows.

This bulk entertaining may, to the uninitiate, sound fairly simple—but behind each dinner, lunch, reception is the exhausting process of grouping, which means getting together those who fall into the same official category, have the same interests, should for one reason or another, meet. This not only involves the most delicate form of social, diplomatic, economic and Fourth Estate know-how, but hour-after-hour struggles with the telephone as well. Once the guest list is decided upon and the invitations sent out, the real struggle often begins.

Ladies Luncheon a Headache

FIRST THERE'S a barrage of invitees asking permission to bring along their personal guests. Each answer has to be decided upon quickly. Next, should the party be small—say, like a dance—the social secretary has to help various individual hostesses plan dinners before the dance, keeping these ladies from straying too far outside the invited dance list in their frantic search for extra men.

Since the war, the social secretary's job has more than doubled in trouble—there are economic missions to be contended with; military, naval and air missions on the prowl far from home; distinguished statesmen dropping in from the United Nations, and, last but first, labor leaders and heads of an assortment of productivity committees here to absorb something of our famous know-how.

Each of the social secretaries has her own special problems. Take Mrs. Wahl and Miss Lancastere—they're the gal Fridays of bachelor ambassadors. This makes them natural target not only of safely married hostesses but to Washington's famous battalion of widows—sometimes called "The Fifty Over-Age Destroyers."

Mixed Ages Make It Worse

MRS. WYETH has to cope with a wider span of ages than most secretaries. Her employer, Mme. Bonnet, besides the expected entertainments, has gotten together really wonderful parties for such diverse personalities as Lily Pons, a French six-day bicycling team, and a group of young things invited to dine, dance, and play at Musical Chairs with the snappy naval cadets from the visiting ship Jeanne d'Arc.

Added to all this, the secretary must keep track of the ambassador's appointments, handle gifts, mail and personal problems. It's the most many-faceted job in Washington; to be an embassy social secretary and not go mad involves having the tact of Emily Price Post, the understanding of Mary Haworth, the finesse of Machiavelli and the constitution of John L. Lewis.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Doctor's Mother, Hostess at Dinner Party, Profanely Ordered His Wife to Leave; But Now She Expects Couple to See Her as Usual

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Jack and I have been married two years and we love each other dearly and are very happy—except for the troublesome bullying we receive from his mother.

Usually, I am the target, but Mrs. Day (I'll call her) seems to project her anger and anxieties on Jack, too, and as he is a doctor now specializing in psychiatry he takes it very lightly (or pretends to) when she bullies him. She has a strong temper, and as I am afraid of her tongue lashings I have never rebuked her in any way.

Recently at a dinner party in her home she cursed me and asked me to leave. I left after telling her quietly but firmly that I would never forget the humiliation. Two months have passed since then and she has made no effort to apologize to me, but she does call Jack at his office. She hasn't told him she is sorry either, but she said she would like to have a "formal" relationship with me.

Man Is Unhappy; Wife Is Defensive

I KNOW she hates me and the only reason she wants to resume a relationship is because Jack doesn't visit her as much now as when I accompanied him. In the two years we've been married she has never visited our home and I realize now she has always liked having me placed in a subservient position.

My dilemma is that Jack is unhappy because things have turned out so badly. We have discussed the situation endlessly. He says that no one has ever been able to deal with his mother and freely admits that she is very unstable emotionally. But he also says if I loved him enough I would understand the difficulty and continue our visits to her.

I honestly feel I owe her nothing and my self respect rebels at subjecting myself to further hurt, but for my husband's sake should I force myself to cover up my hostility and resume a false friendship? F. F.

Bible Says Avoid Froward Persons

DEAR F. F.: I differ emphatically, 100 percent, from Jack's theory that if you loved him enough you would accommodate cravenly to his mother's cussedness as he does.

As a matter of fact, the Book of Proverbs in Holy Scripture abounds with graphic reminders to avoid the company of "froward" persons—meaning those who are difficult, unreasonable, wilfully quarrelsome, etc., and it minces no words in stating that the ways of such people are "abomination to the Lord."

Christian charity is one thing, poor spirit something else. And whereas it would be morally fine to forgive Mrs. Day from the heart (that is, in the privacy of your feelings) for her shocking attack on your sensibilities at her dinner party, it would be ignobly servile to visit her home again, unless and until she negotiates directly with you to revive a formal exchange—and either plainly or by implication submits a suitable apology for her cruel discourtesy.

Man Offers Wife Sick Relationships

SINCE SHE is sending you messages through Jack, in effect signaling you to humor her selfishness but at your own risk, it seems quite fair and fully appropriate to send your answer similarly—by telling Jack to let her know you will receive her with "formal" courtesy in your home, if she cares to come. And let the matter rest there, unless she chooses to follow through.

Inasmuch as Jack freely admits that his mother is very unstable and impossibly difficult in relation to everyone she knows, don't you see the absurdity of thinking the wretched impasse to which she's brought you is a special problem, and a "dilemma" that might be solved by your bellycrawling to her.

Actually it's not a case of "things turning out badly," but simply a very sick family relationship that you married into—for obviously the mother's neurotic temperament and disturbed performance exert a predominant influence in Jack's life even now, and that's how she intends it to be. For advice, recognize the nature of the squeeze you're in, and follow the promptings of self respect in standing your ground against emotional pressures that would strip you of dignity and adult rights in the situation. M. H.

Chic, N'est-ce Pas?

Paris Puts 'Oomph' in Umbrella

By Peggy Preston

THERE is no doubt about it—the French have a way with fashion that is all their own. Even the lowly umbrella takes on a special bit of chic when it hails from the workshops of Paris.

If you'd like to see for yourself (and have a delightful half hour doing so), we advise you to stop in at the third floor of Julius Garfinckel & Co. this week. There you will find on display a collection of French accessories that will start you "ahing" and "ohing" in no time at all. You have until Saturday, at 5:30 p. m. to catch a glimpse of this intriguing display.

A young man named Harrison Elliott, who calls himself the "Yankee Peddler," will be on hand to describe the delectable items. A former GI, who fell in love with Paris during the war, Harrison now commutes between that city and the United States, carrying his custom-made wares to San Francisco, New York and points North and South

He will show you, for instance, exquisite custom-made shoes designed by Donna Greco; evening sweaters by Simone Cange; costume jewelry so startling and imaginative that it is more effective than the real McCoy; satin gloves, novel playing cards, scarves, flowers and precious perfumes.

The shoes, however, are among the unique pieces in the collection. Both fabrics and workmanship are importantly lovely. One sample model, fashioned of pale blue doeskin, is embroidered in delicate sprays of pink and white apple blossoms. This, Harrison told us, is the handiwork of Indo-Chinese refugees in Paris, and three months is required to make a single pair. Gold leaf.

Sweaters and blouses are clever little wisps. In them the French have combined a solid, basic fabric with something quite luxurious. Plain linen string, for instance, is coupled with handmade mesh of gold thread; wool jersey with silver lame.

Two-Inch Earrings

THERE is also a dress of black, silk velvet chenille that is bound to capture your attention, as well as a gray jersey blouse and skirt, the latter with pleats woven into the fabric.

Then, there is the costume jewelry department, with glittering earrings measuring at least 2 inches and crystal balls in which melted gold glitters are made up into necklaces of great charm. And something that will amuse you is a huge ring that needs to be worn on two fingers!

Umbrellas, both long and short, form another interesting group in the collection. Handles take fascinating turns, and a delicate little evening model of gold, waterproof silk is a real delight.

PARISIAN shoes are among the cleverest accessory items to reach our shores from the French capital. Donna Greco designed these dainty models, which rival fabulous hats as "conversation" pieces. At left is an opera pump of dark green leather, the scroll pattern stitched against white. Gold leaf in a delicate grape cluster design is a charming accent on the black suede shoe at center. Apple blossoms are embroidered in silk threads on the pale blue doeskin pump at left. From the collection of French accessories being shown this week at Garfinckel's

Colonial Dames to Mark 'Bill of Rights Day'

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

THROUGHOUT the Nation today members of the National Society of Colonial Dames will pause to observe "Bill of Rights Day." Many will visit historic Gunston Hall on the Potomac, once the home of George Mason, author of the Virginia Declaration of Rights.

It was at Gunston Hall that Mason conceived and wrote the Virginia Declaration of Rights which formed the basis of our National Bill of Rights drawn up 11 years later in Philadelphia. On December 15, 1791, Virginia became the tenth State to ratify the first 10 Amendments of the Constitution, thus bringing into effect our famous charter of liberties.

When the last owner of Gunston Hall, Louis Hertle, died last September, the national shrine was turned over to the National Society of Colonial Dames for preservation and operation. Miss Virginia L. Hunt is regent-at-large for Gunston Hall.

The beautiful house, nearly 200 years old, in which the famous bill was written, is now open to the public, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

DAR to Mark Oak Site

A MARKER dedicated to the ancient Glebe Oak in Rock Creek Cemetery will be unveiled in a historic ceremony, Saturday, December 17, 1:30 p. m. by the Historians and Conservation Committees, D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution. Unveiling the marker will be Mrs. George D. Nolan, historians' committee chairman, and Mrs. Harold C. Marsh, chairman of conservation committees.

Participating in the ceremony will be Mrs. David L. Wells, District State Regent; Miss Mamie Hawkins, State Chaplain; Mrs. Harry Gutridge, Mrs. Harry M. Howard and the Rev. Charles W. Wood, rector of Rock Creek Church.

One of America's great trees, the Glebe Oak is believed to have determined the site of Rock Creek Church, "The Country Church in the City." Established in 1712, it is the oldest instituion in what is now the District of Columbia.

Christmas Fantasy Slated by Club

THE art, drama, music and recreation sections of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase have combined their talents to present a Christmas program at 1 p. m, Wednesday for the balance of the members.

"The Saints' Return," a one-act Christmas fantasy by Esther Willard Bates, is directed by Doris Dewey Day, chairman of the drama section.

Ask Anne About Making Aluminum Trays

I wish to make a few aluminum trays. The person who is going to show me has made a great many herself, but I notice they all seem to show the scratches on them from the steel wool. She says they all have them more or less, though I notice in the ones purchased in a store are not so prominent. Could you tell me how to finish them off so as not to show so much? She uses steel wool size 100. A. B. N.

I suggest you use a jeweler's grit abrasive cloth such as emery paper instead of steel wool for the polishing. Emery cloth, especially for this purpose, can be purchased at a jewelry supply house. If you don't know where to locate such a firm in your town, ask a jewelry repair man for the name of one. The approved method for polishing metals is to start with a coarse abrasive to remove deep scratches, advancing gradually to the finer abrasives and finishing with an extremely fine abrasive. In this instance, you would probably start with No. 6 and advance gradually until you finish with a No. 0 paper.

Polishing metals by hand takes a lot of time and more than a little hard work. The highly polished, scratch-free surfaces on commercially made trays are done by buffing machines. Sometimes it is possible to have buffing done mechanically if you will take the tray to a jewelry repair man, but this is not one of his regular services.

What type of lacquer does one put on silver candlesticks to keep them from tarnishing? Where can it be obtained? A. L. C.

Use a clear brushing lacquer which can be purchased at most paint stores on decorative pieces of silver to prevent tarnish. Before applying, wipe the pieces well with lacquer thinner to remove all traces of oil from the hands. It is a good idea to do the work with gloves on to prevent the transfer of oil. If the lacquer does not flow smoothly onto the piece, thin it a bit with the lacquer thinner. If for any reason the lacquer does not go on smoothly, do not attempt to touch it up—remove it by using lacquer thinner and start over.

To the ladies who want to make an inexpensive blackboard, we made a very satisfactory one by painting a piece of plywood with blackboard paint using several coats. The paint is Lawrence Blackboard Slating. K. L. S.

The portion that has been exposed to the sun has faded out the blue and they are tan in that portion, whereas the upper part has the design in blue. I should like to dye them a tan or some other color and would appreciate your telling me how to go about it. A. B. N.

To get an even dye job, first remove all the color by using a commercial color remover. Buy a remover which is designed especially for rayon or silk and use it according to directions which come with the product you buy.

When the color is gone from the drapes, you can then dye them any color you wish. Here again follow the directions which come with the dye you buy.

When dyeing fabrics, be sure to use a large vessel so they will not be crowded. Stir constantly while the dye is being boiled or absorbed into the fabrics to avoid streaks.

An easy way to dye the curtains would be to do it in an automatic washer. If you do not have one, some public automatic laundries will permit their machines to be used for this purpose.

Is there any way in which to wash badly soiled brown pigskin gloves so that they will not come out faded and hard? E. L. F.

Good results can usually be obtained by using this method to wash washable gloves: Make a suds of a mild oil base soap such as castile and squeeze the suds through and through the leather. During the washing turn them inside out to thoroughly clean the reverse side of the leather. When clean (it may take more than one sudsing) rinse thoroughly. Pull them into shape and pat as much moisture out of the leather as possible with an absorbent towel. Now, lightly stuff the fingers and hand of the gloves with tissue paper to hold them in shape and hasten the drying. Do not place in sun or near heat to dry. Working the leather between the fingers occasionally during the drying process will soften it.

I have some pretty bead necklaces sent me by an Italian to sell. Do you know any store in Washington which would sell these on commission? S. C. P.

The Shut-Ins Craft Service at 910 23d st. nw., will sell these beads for you. I suggest you call them at REpublic 1951 for further information.

Parties Spell 'Hello', 'Goodbye'

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

LAGOS, NIGERIA, will be the next post for the popular Colonial Affairs Attache of the British Embassy, E. E. Sabben-Clare, and Mrs. Sabben-Clare, who are sailing on the Queen Mary Saturday. Before going to their new post they will have a month's vacation in London.

They have been widely entertained during the past two weeks or so, the final farewell being a dinner party last evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Sloan. State Department friends of the Sabben-Clares were invited for dinner, and many more friends dropped in for a drink after dinner.

Miss Du Val Hostess At Christmas Dance

MISS ANNE DU VAL gave a Christmas dance last evening at her home on Dupont Circle. Dancing was from 9 to midnight to the music of David McWilliams' Army and Navy Club Orchestra. Christmas carols were sung at midnight led by Mrs. Lindsay Howell du Val at the piano, and Santa Claus appeared in the person of Grahame Smallwood, jr.

Among the guests invited were Gen. and Mrs. Adam Richmond, Col. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle, Col. and Mrs. David M. Dunne, Mme. Anibal Diaz, wife of the Dominican Third Secretary; Senor and Senora Guiseppe Zeno and their daughter, Senorita Elizabeth Zeno, and Mr. and Mrs. John de Pascual.

Silver Snowflakes Sparkle at Party

WHITE chrysanthemums and red candles decorated the home of Mrs. Edith Burrows for her Christmas party held yesterday from 6 to 8 p. m. The windows sparkled with silver snowflakes and holly wreaths were tied with ribbons and bows. The hostess herself was gowned in sapphire blue velvet and wore a white orchid in her dark hair.

Among the guests who were invited were the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon, Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Franklin Brannan, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Associate Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark, Admiral "Oz" Colclough, Admiral and Mrs. Jack Bowling, Maj. Gen. and Albert Cox, Col. "Rusty" Cox, Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Forrest Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. August Boas, Baroness Marie von Arnime and Mrs. John Steelman.

There were many more, nearly 150 in all. Cocktails and punch were served with a buffet which included turkeys and baked hams, salad and ices.

Danish Naval Attache Will Be Honored

LIEUT. COMDR. VERNON H. GRANT, USNR, and Mrs. Grant will entertain at a cocktail and smorgasbord party Friday in honor of Admiral E. Quistgaard, newly appointed Naval Attache of the Danish Embassy, and his daughter, Miss Birte Quistgaard, who have just arrived in Washington. Mrs. Grant, who is Danish born, came to Washington in 1943.

A musical program will be given by Mrs. Howard G. Hill, well known in music circles as Maria de la Hull, formerly with the London Opera Company.

The Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffmann and their daughter, Miss Lisa de Kauffmann have been asked to the party, and others include Admiral and Mrs. A. M. Pride, Admiral and Mrs. T. C. Longquest, Admiral and Mrs. Lloyd Harrison, Admiral and Mrs. C. M. Bolster. Capt. and Mrs. Lynn Woodruff, Capt. and Mrs. R. S. Hatcher, Capt. and Mrs. M. T. Evans, Capt. and Mrs. W. H. Miller, Capt. and Mrs. R. H. Mahachek.

Also, Col. and Mrs. J. L. Beam, Col. and Mrs. Howard G. Hill, Commander and Mrs. G. N. Eisenhart, Commander F. P. Brown, Commander and Mrs. R. H. Fagan, Commander and Mrs. Fred Barden, Maj. R. E. Ward, Royal Engineers, British Army; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. R. A. Black, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. K. B McCutcheon, Lieut Norphlett Scott, Mrs. J. J. Cunningham, Miss Carol Cunningham, Mrs. Thomas B. Dunn, Miss Ruth MacDonald and Lieut. Comdr. R. J. Craig.

Morrows Give Cocktail Party

CAPT. J. C. MORROW, Naval Attache of the Australian Embassy, and Mrs. Morrow, entertained about 80 guests at cocktails on Tuesday.

Among those in the group were Admiral and Mrs. Carl Espe, Admiral Sir Frederick Dalrymple-Hamilton and Lady Dalrymple-Hamilton, the Naval Attache of the Thailand Embassy, Rear Admiral Mon Chao Kanjitphol Abhakorn and Princess Abhakorn, the Naval Attache of the Netherlands Embassy, Rear Admiral Jonkheer H. A. van Foreest, and Mme. van Foreest; Brigadier D. Chaudhuri, Military and Air Attache of the Indian Embassy, and Capt. E. B. Strauss, USN.

Mrs. Robert Tyson entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home in Frederick, Md. for Miss Katrina Himes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes of Prospect Hall, Frederick, who will be married on December 30 to Lieut. John B. Wogan, jr., Air Force, who is stationed at Randolph Air Base, San Antonio, Tex.

Coming From England

Mrs. R. S. Franks, mother of the British Ambassador, and Miss J. M. Franks, his sister, of Somerset, England, are expected in Washington for the Christmas holidays.

MRS. OSCAR CHAPMAN, right, inspects a rehabilitated doll held by Miss Marionette Phipps, one of Goodwill Industries' handicapped workers. Goodwill dolls are dressed for Christmas by members of the Goodwill Guild, and collected at the annual doll tea, which will take place Friday afternoon in the dining room of the Goodwill Industries, 1218 New Hampshire ave. nw. Dolls will be on sale at the Goodwill stores

Goodwill Guild Dresses Dolls For Yule Tea

The Goodwill Guild will hold its annual Christmas doll tea in the dining rooms of the Administration Building of the Goodwill Industries, 1218 New Hampshire ave. nw., on Friday. A meeting of the guild preceeding the tea will begin at 2:30 p. m.

Every year members of the guild dress donated dolls in discarded materials given by Washington housewives. The dolls come to Goodwill in various states of dilapidation eloquent of a hard life. Handicapped employes of Goodwill prepare the dolls for rebirth, and guild members make new clothes for them.

Then each doll, looking like new, is ready to make Christmas happy for an underprivileged child.

Stanley Woodward, Jr., Marries Miss Patricia Wynne in Paris

STANLEY WOODWARD, Chief of Protocol, and Mrs. Woodward, announce the marriage of their son, Stanley Woodward, jr., to Miss Patricia Wynne. The ceremony took place yesterday in Paris.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Emeline Avery Wolfe.

Mr. Woodward attended Brooks School for Boys, North Andover, Mass., and served in the Army during the war. He has been studying art in Paris where he and Mrs. Woodward will continue to make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodward flew to Paris for the wedding of their son and are expected back in Washington before Christmas.

Miss Jean Theodore, John Ale to Wed

Announcement is made by Mrs. Marie E. Theodore of Arlington, Va., of the engagement of her daughter, Jean Marie, to John R. Ale, son of Mrs. Ella J. Ale of Arlington and Chicago, Ill., and the late Capt. John H. Ale.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Charles M. Theodore. Mr. Ale is a graduate of Georgetown University.

Red Cross Has Heavy Yule Load

During the year, utilitarian garments such as children's panties, bathrobes and capes are turned out on a mass production scale. But at Christmas time, thousands of red net stockings take shape under the experienced hands.

Gifts most suitable for each hospital are decided well in advance by Red Cross recreation workers at each institution. Even at St. Elizabeths where some of the patients scarcely know it is Christmas, the hospital and the Red Cross work together to see that there is some kind of gift for every one.

Organizations Take Over

EARLY in the season, organizations pitch in, volunteering to take over hundreds of the items on the Red Cross list. Business groups often pool their pennies to buy the big items, like television sets, which appear in limited numbers on the list.

But to fill all requests right down to the last round orange and the last silver icicle, the Red Cross turns to individual contributors. Each gift bears a tag with the name of the contributor.

An amazing number of bright red stockings, bulging with little gifts, bear tags reading "From the Walsh House Coffee Pot."

The Coffee Pot idea was originated by Miss Pearl Kitchener, switchboard operator at Walsh House where many of the local Red Cross activities took place. As an accommodation for volunteer workers who put in long hours folding surgical bandages, Miss Kitchener began to keep a pot of coffee perking all the time. The money charged to keep the Coffee Pot self-supporting began to accumulate and many a Red Cross project has received a contribution from the Walsh House Coffee Pot.

The price of coffee is currently 8 cents at Walsh House, but the customers seem very careless about taking their change out of the gold fish bowl. So careless, that Children's Hospital and the service hospitals are sharing the Coffee Pot profits this Christmas.

Newlyweds to Return After Wedding Trip

They were married November 24 in St. Patrick's Church. Mrs. Baker is the former Miss Dorothy May Comstock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Comstock of Springfield. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Baker of Pickens.

Spend Honeymoon in East

Mr. and Mrs. George Jay Deegan, who were married November 26 at the Blessed Sacrament Church, are spending their honeymoon in New York and Pennsylvania.

The bride is the former Miss Anna Marie Moore, daughter of J. J. Moore of Huntington, W. Va., and the late Mrs. Moore.

Legion Auxiliary Plans Holiday Party

SANTA CLAUS will also be at the American Legion Auxiliary party on Tuesday for the patients of Mount Alto Hospital.

The party, which will be at 7:30 p. m. in the recreation hall, will include an entertainment program and community singing. The North Carolina Avenue Methodist Choir will sing Christmas carols under the leadership of Miss Grace Gosnell.

The Senior, Junior and Intermediate Auxiliaries of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society of Denver will celebrate their 25 years of service with a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel on March 15.

Bouncing Betty Coed Eats Too Much

By Ida Jean Kain

"The food is so fattening," complain teen-agers who are off at college pursuing a higher education. Well, the meals are regular and the food is nourishing to meet the needs of growing girls. Still, it's only overeating that goes to waist. And the soda fountain across the street is a very popular spot.

I asked a pal of mine, who is a dietitian at a girls' school, why the girls tend to add padding and she tipped me off by describing a typical session with bouncing Betty Coed.

The opening remark: "I'm gaining too much weight here—the meals are too high in starch."

The dietitian smiles, invites her to sit down and talk about her food habits, and which foods she chooses from the meals served, for students do have some choice.

"What about breakfast?" asks the dietitian.

It seems the young lady doesn't eat breakfast . . . she's just not hungry in the morning. She's really not a big eater, she explains hastily.

Does she eat anything before lunch? Nothing much, is the reply . . . perhaps a candy bar, maybe a few cookies . . . to tide her over. But that's all.

Lunch? Well at lunch, which she eats out, she eats hardly anything . . . a sandwich and a coke —and maybe a sweet.

"But after class you're a little hungry and have something then?" the dietitian encourages. Well yes, she is quite hungry then and usually has a sundae . . . but after all, she didn't eat much for lunch, she repeats.

And what about dinner? Why that's just it—she doesn't eat much dinner, the food is so fattening. She takes a little of this and a little of that, but it's so high in starch . . . she never can eat potatoes.

The dietitian listens patiently and then suggests that possibly she has a snack while studying in the evening—a coke, and maybe peanuts? Well . . . perhaps . . . and maybe a malted or a soda after study hours.

There you are. That youngster is piling up trouble for herself Not only will she be overweight and poorly nourished—for she gets most of the calories in assorted sweets—but she is forming wretchedly poor food habits and will be struggling for the rest of her life against eating between meals. Chances are one day she'll wear a size 40 and blame the whole thing on her glands.

The "diet" for today is simply to cut down to three meals a day. But you girls in school who are conscientiously trying to hold the weight line and still seem to be getting too many calories might ask the dietitian in charge for a weight-control table.

If she possibly can, she will cooperate. See that you do, too. A sweet between-meals can undo the dietitian's best efforts. Get the right food habits now, and you'll never have a weight problem.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

If you've learned to be honest with yourself, you'll probably admit that your 8-to-12-year-old boys are often a "pain in the neck."

Yet, it is perfectly normal for boys to play tricks on each other and on the rest of the family. They think it terribly funny to belch or make other crude noises and to do things that bother the neighbors.

Of course, we have to set some limits. At times a little discipline is in order. But this period of development will be a lot easier to take if we can only realize that "boys will be boys."

One fairly good way to prepare oneself for the ordeal is to go back and read some of the stories about "bad" boys. Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer," his "Huckleberry Finn," Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" and Aldrich's Story of a Bad Boy are all good textbooks for this job. The town in which these youngsters grew up may have been different from your community. The times were different, too. But essentially, real boys are much the same.

How Many Can Afford Both the House And Trip?

Sitting around chewing the fat and drinking coffee after the paper was rolling the other night, we got to talking about houses. One of the boys is having his house custom built.

When he told us that his wife went out to watch the job every day, one of my colleagues was incredulous. "What's the difference?" asked the man who's building.

"About 5 thousand dollars," replied the cynic. "Every time she suggests a change, you can kiss another stack of 100-dollar bills goodbye."

An old-timer at the other end of the table chimed in with: "He's absolutely right. We went through it, and I know.

"The cheapest way to build a house is to sign the contract and then leave immediately for a trip to Europe."

OFF-DUTY REPORTER

When I answered my phone, the voice at the other end said: "This is Inspector McGinnis."

"Al Lewis," I exclaimed, pleased to note that our veteran police reporter was using the nickname I had pinned on him some years back. "What are you doing out of the hospital?"

"I'm not out," sighed Lewis. "But there's a rumor that they're going to spring me in a couple of days. I'm calling you from my couch of pain."

"What's up?"

"I've got a cute item for you."

"From a hospital bed you dig up items?"

"Oh, sure. I keep my ears open wherever I go. You know Victor Ludewig, don't you?"

"Isn't he the superintendent at George Washington University Hospital?"

"That's the guy. Well, the item is that he's getting a dose of his own medicine. He was admitted as a patient yesterday."

"He was admitted yesterday? How come it took you 24 hours to phone in?"

"Aw, go jump in the lake. You're worse than the city desk. Goodbye."

Merry-Go-Round

The Debate When Eccles Met Snyder

By Drew Pearson

The inflation row between Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and Federal Reserve dynamo Marriner Eccles attracted headlines a few days ago. But when the two men met behind the closed doors of a Senate committee, the final results of the feud were hushed up.

Snyder

It was Snyder who, perhaps knowing he would be no match for the shrewd and experienced Eccles, insisted on a closed-door meeting. However, here is what happened.

Present at the Senate session was Tom McCabe, popular, easy-going Federal Reserve chairman, who agrees with Snyder on most things and who pleaded with both Eccles and Snyder to cease their "public squabbling" because of repercussions on business and the stock market.

Eccles shot back that stock-market reaction to his dispute with Snyder was far outweighed by the future economic and financial welfare of the Nation. It would be better to have a showdown now, public or otherwise, he said, rather than wait until inflation hits us.

"The press has made this a personal dispute between Secretary Snyder and myself, but it's not that at all," Eccles declared. "It's a question of deep, fundamental policy that affects the future welfare of every man, woman and child in the United States. The Federal Reserve system cannot adequately carry out its obligation to control inflationary trends while the Treasury continues to borrow at fixed, low-interest charges."

The interest rate (now averaging about 2.2 percent on long- and short-term Government securities) should be somewhat higher, Eccles contended, to discourage dumping of Government bonds by banks, insurance companies and other big purchasers. It also should be more flexible, he argued, so the Federal Reserve Board could use it as a lever to prevent either an overexpansion or a tightening of bank credit.

Interest rates on Government securities naturally influence the rates on commercial loans, Eccles pointed out, and therefore the quantity of such credit—which the Reserve System is expected to control.

"Well, the Treasury has obligations, also," argued Snyder. "Let the interest rate go up on Government bonds and there will be a howl from farmers and other groups, who will then have to pay higher financing charges on private loans and mortgages."

Turning to Senator Douglas of Illinois, chairman of the meeting, Snyder remarked that Congress was chiefly responsible for inflation trends.

"Inflation originates in the Congress," he commented, tartly. "If Congress votes to appropriate great sums of money and then doesn't increase taxes to balance this spending, you are making inflation. You can't build up big deficits without taking risks."

The Treasury chief aded that the low interest the Government was paying on its bond isuses represented that much of a saving to the taxpayer and helped to balance the budget. However, Eccles shot back that it did nothing of the kind, but was a rob-Peter-to-pay-Paul policy that actually cost the taxpayers more in the long run.

Low interest rates on Government bonds often lead to dumping by big investors, who prefer to reinvest their money in less secure, but more profitable, commercial loans, he explained. Since the Federal Reserve system is required by law to buy up the bonds dumped on the open market, this further increases national bank reserves—against which more inflationary money is then issued.

The amount of money the Treasury is saving now by its fixed, low-interest rates is only a pittance compared with the future cost of inflation—if Snyder continues his present policy, Eccles warned.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—A strange contrast between the weary old and the industrious new in Mexico was observed recently by Isadore Grossman, the New York sculptor. He was riding on a streetcar and suddenly felt a man's hand on his shoulder. He turned and found the passenger dead. Grossman went up to the conductor and reported: "A passenger just died" . . . "Don't bother me," shrugged the conductor. "We have our own worries—the peso falling, concentration of wealth, American exploitation." Grossman took the
